On Niagara's Brink

Sunday was spent showing Niagara Falls to three young daughters. For the occasion, there was an unusually fine rainbow, starting on one side of the Horseshoe Falls, ending on the other, no "pot of gold" visible at either end.

The children, who knew about the big lakes from their geographies, were interested in so much water falling down over the big cliff. Your narrator was interested in wild ducks standing on the edge of the stone precipice on the American side in a spot where the water was rather thin.

Those intelligent ducks, each being its own flying machine, did not worry about being swept over the edge. When it happened occasionally, they flew up through the mist, and came back.

They chose their hunting ground intelligently, for small fish, drawn into the rapids, knocked against rocks, unable to swim upstream, are very dizzy as they go over the edge of the cataract. It is easy for the ducks to select the right size and swallow them.

Some able conqueror from Asia may do the same thing for some of the poor fish of Europe some day, unless they develop intelligence and learn to refrain from wholesale murder.

The Ethiopian legation in London, in a public statement, warns Italians to discontinue "reported use of poison gas, explosives and dum-dum bullets," suggesting that such warfare "may bring savage retaliation against Italian war prisoners.

"It will not be possible to restrain the wilder and bereaved sections of the Abyssinian army from retaliating on Italian prisoners."

Ethiopia's representative warns "all white people that they will be intensely hated by all peoples of Africa and, we think, of Asia, for some years to come."

On the other hand, reports from the "Holy City" of Aksum, where Italians began distributing grain to the starving, say:

"Ten chiefs came in from the surrounding country to surrender with their men and swear allegiance to Italy."

Those that came expressed delight when informed "by Italian political officials that slavery was abolished."

The Ethiopian Emperor has ordered 500,000 warriors to attack the Italians on the Tigre front line, because "waiting for the League of Nations will be a long wait." He is even thinking of going to the front line himself.

In that same Tigre country, held now by Italy, all the slaves have been set free and Italy, wishing to make friends, will pay cash for slaves freed from their masters. There remains a problem about married slaves. Will their marriages be recognized under the Italian law?

Intelligent fellow citizens of the colored race in America may find their sympathy for Ethiopia cooled by the fact that Mussolini is ending slavery as he advances.

Ethiopia's ruling family, of an Arabic branch of the Semitic race, has for centuries found prosperity in the slave trade. Many of the blacks, sent in horrible slave ships to the United States in days past, were shipped here by Haile Selassie's Arabic ancestors.

A League of Nations appeal to the United States "to scrap its neutrality policy in the Italo-Ethiopian war, and join Europe in clamping iron-clad sanctions against Italy" is on its way to our State Department.

President Roosevelt, returning next Thursday, might reply: "What about a little payment on account of the ten thousand million dollars you owe us? That interests us more than 'clamping.' "

You will be delighted to hear that the League of Nations would like the United States to agree to help make good the losses of small countries that lose money by refusing to trade with Italy.

Your Supreme Court orders the national administration to answer, by November 11, the state of Georgia's attack on the New Deal "cotton control" program. The administration may find itself in the position of a small boy with a bunch of pretty gas-filled balloons, the Supreme Court playing the role of the wicked big boy sticking a pin in each balloon. That fiend "thang" was NRA.

PRESIDENT CALVIN COOLIDGE: Addressing the seventh semi-annual meeting of the business organization of the government. . . . Washington, D. C., June 30, 1924.

We must have no carelessness in our dealings with public property or the expenditure of public money. Such a condition is characteristic either of an undeveloped people or of a decadent civilization. America is neither.

THINK CLERIC ENDED LIFE OFF BOAT

(Copyright, 1935, by the Boston Evening American)

He apparently leaped overboard.

He is the son of Rev. W. J. Barnes, pastor of the Baptist Church in Easton, Pa., and was returning to his studies in Boston after a short vacation at his home.

His father informed the Boston Evening American by long-distance telephone that the son left Easton by bus yesterday, intending to board the S. S. Boston in New York.

A man entered on the passenger list as Leslie T. Barnes vanished from that steamer and when it docked here today a two-word note was found with luggage in his empty stateroom. The note read:

UNSIGNED NOTE

"Forgive me."

It was unsigned and bore no address.

Barnes, his father said, was unmarried and was former assistant city editor of the Easton Express.

Dr. Barnes said his son had been here a year studying with Rev. Spence Burton, rector of the Church of St. John the Evangelist and local head of the Cowley Fathers, whose organization is known as the Society of St. John the Evangelist.

Barnes returned to his Easton home a week ago and, his father said, appeared in good spirits. Dr. Barnes said he knew of no reason why his son should vanish or take his own life.

INTENDED TO JOIN

Father Burton, who visited Station J where Barnes' luggage was taken from the steamer, refused information about the case except to say that the young man had indicated his intention of joining the order—whose members are committed to chastity, obedience and poverty.

Members of the Cowley Fathers are unmarried and Dr. Burton said his son was not romantically inclined, contradicting a police theory that a love affair which interfered with his theological career might have been motive for the disappearance or suicide.

Officers of the Boston said they believed Barnes was aboard when the steamer cleared New York last evening.

The Society of St. John the Evangelist is an Episcopal order founded in Oxford, England, in 1836. Its headquarters here are at St. Francis House, 980 Memorial drive, Cambridge.

'Eskie' Clark Gets Lafayette Post

By AUSTEN LAKE

Henry W. "Eskie" Clark, assistant to Bill Bingham in Harvard's athletic department, today was named Athletic director at Lafayette College, Easton, Pa.

Clark plans to continue with his work at Harvard into January 1, when he will move to Easton and begin the task of reorganizing the Lafayette sports program, which has run down during late years.

In taking "Eskie" to Easton, Lafayette has given him carte blanche to adopt whatever policies he sees fit, which presumably will be the denaturalizing of the college's previous system of fanning the field for likely varsity men.

As assistant director at Harvard, "Eskie" has won a reputation for fair dealing and thorough understanding of college sport. As head of the intramural program, he has built up Harvard's house and class competition to one of the best internal sport plans in the country.

With Mary Young, veteran actress, Elaine came here from New York. When she reached Boston she went to a Boston hotel with her mother.

The 20-year-old former Barnard College girl will have a part in Mary Young's new production, "Katydid—So What!" which opens a week from next Monday night at the Copley.

Elaine's stage debut in Boston came more as an accident than as design. Miss Young explained this afternoon.

The actress had telegraphed to John Barrymore in Baltimore, offering him a part in the production, but had received no answer.

Then Miss Young went to Baltimore in search of "Caliban" Barrymore. She failed to find him, but did run across his "Ariel" in the person of Elaine.

It struck Miss Young then, she said, that there was a role in the new show which would be perfect for Elaine.

"I did have a fond dream that my new play might bring the two of them together again," said Miss Young.

JOCKEY SAYS 'NOT GUILTY' IN SLAYING

BULLETIN
By Associated Press

Baltimore, Oct. 22—Whitey Danenhauer, who came here with Willie Saunders, jockey sought for questioning in a Louisville slaying, was taken to police headquarters today for interrogation.

"I'm not guilty of that thing," Saunders told his employer, Hal Price Headley, the stable owner revealed today.

According to Headley, the jockey said he had been on a Sunday night party with two men, one of them named Tony Sani, an exercise boy. Police were searching today for Sani.

Saunders declared to Headley that he had left the drinking party at 1 a. m. and up to that time nobody had been killed.

Headley advised Saunders to go back to Louisville and face the authorities.

The jockey left his hotel here at 7:30 last night and said he was returning to Louisville, where the mangled body of Mrs. Evelyn Sliwinski, wife of a Louisville tailor, was found in a roadway early yesterday.

Since that time, however, nothing has been seen of Saunders or

Three Cambridge Tots Lured Away

Three children, two girls and a boy under five years of age, were reported to Cambridge police to have been enticed into an automobile this afternoon by an elderly man who has da box of apples beside him in the driver's seat.

William Ackerly of Holly street, Cambridge, father of Shirley Ackerly, four, made the report to police. He identified the two other children lured away as Robert and Dolores Neer, living near him in Holly place.

According to Inspector Thomas Leary, the man about 60 years old, induced the three children to enter his car.

COMMONS IN ROW AFTER PEACE PLEA

Latest War Developments

Hundreds of Ethiopian warriors reported killed or wounded in battle near Aduwa. Italian troops rout native troops who attacked in violation of orders.

With all eyes turned on London, British Foreign Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare warned the world that "there is too much inflammable material lying around," and pleaded urgently for peace in Africa. Addressing the House of Commons, assembled a week ahead of schedule, Sir Samuel asked for settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian conflict before economic penalties are applied. He denied that military penalties against Mussolini were contemplated.

New British Plea for Peace

By International News Service

London, Oct. 22—Foreign Minister Sir Samuel Hoare today delivered to the nations of the world an urgent appeal for settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian war—through Geneva—before the League of Nations applies economic penalties against Italy.

If application of these economic sanctions is necessary, however, Sir Samuel said he believed they would be effective in definitely shortening the war providing "states not members of the league do not frustrate them."

The United States, Germany and Japan are the principal powers in this category.

In debate in Commons which followed the foreign minister's address, Sir Herbert Samuel, leader of the Liberal party, created a sensation by demanding that Britain go on from economic penalties and apply the same efforts toward having "further sanctions" used against Italy.

An uproar followed in which cries of "That Is War!" drowned out Sir Herbert.

Application of military penalties against Italy has been discussed at Geneva since the beginning of the London, Oct. 22—Runners reaching Addis Ababa from the line southwest of Aduwa told how several hundred Ethiopian warriors, rushing into battle against orders of their leader, had been killed or wounded, Exchange Telegraph reported today.

Their commander, Dedjasmatch Ayelu, who had not been able to restrain his fighters, finally joined them in their onslaught of Italian positions and was himself wounded.

Dedjasmatch Ayelu was at one time reported to have 100,000 warriors under him in the sector north of the Semien country.

BRITAIN PLEADS FOR ITALIAN-ETHIOPIAN PEACE

Italo-Ethiopian dispute, Sir Samuel said.

The foreign minister's remarks were contained in his eagerly-awaited address to the House of Commons, convened a week early to debate the crisis, on Britain's position regarding both the African and European situations.

LEAGUE MUST O. K. PEACE

Britain, he made it clear, will approve of no settlement of the African war not acceptable to both Ethiopia and the league as well as to Italy, revealing his government remains adamant on this point.

In making his appeal for an "eleventh-hour" settlement through Geneva before economic sanctions are applied, Sir Samuel commented that "there is too much inflammable material lying about" for any delay.

The address, as expected, was aimed at convincing the world Britain was not acting alone against Italy, but it contained many indications that she will remain firm in upholding League of Nations principles against Italy as a formally-named aggressor.

AIM TO LIMIT WAR

His principal points were:

The economic pressure which the League has proposed to exert upon Italy is intended not to expand the Italo-Ethiopian war, but to limit it.

Complete solidarity exists between France and Britain on the interpretation of Article XVI of the League covenant, the sanctions article.

There are now three parties to the dispute—not two. They are the League, Italy and Ethiopia.

"The worship of force in many parts of the world has compelled us in the interests of peace to look to our defenses"—the only reference to the massing of British land, sea and air forces in the Mediterranean area.

"We pray that the principles of collective action will be upheld and that a way will be speedily found to end this hateful controversy."

SEES EMPIRE UNITED

For home consumption, on the eve of national elections, Sir Samuel stressed the "impressive unanimity" of the British empire in supporting the government.

"PEACE OR DESTRUCTION"

"There was a cry on the continent early in this century of 'world power or decline.'

"Now," he added, "we say 'world peace or destruction'."

In a long defense of British policy throughout the African dispute Sir Samuel said there never had been any difference of opinion between himself and Capt. Anthony Eden, youthful British minister for league affairs. Capt. Eden, said the foreign minister, has had the government's full support at Geneva.

ACCORD WITH FRANCE

Complete solidarity exists between France and Britain on the interpretation of article XVI, the sanctions article, of the League of Nations covenant, said Sir Emanuel.

"In the event of an isolated attack, inconceivable though such madness might be, we and the rest of the League stand together and resist it with our full and united force," he said.

PICKUP

CITES "BREATHING SPELL"

"There is still a breathing space before economic pressure can be applied," said Sir Samuel. "Can it not be used for another attempt at settling?

"Italy is still a member of the League, and I welcome this fact. Cannot this eleventh-hour chance be used to make it unnecessary to proceed further along this unattractive road of economic sanctions against a fellow-member, an old friend, and former ally?

"I know not whether there's hope or not in what I am urging.

"I do, however, know that great issues are at stake which are much greater than the local merits of the African controversy, the issue of progress toward a new order of international relations, or reaction to a state of affairs that we hoped had ended.

Mr. Hearst Dedicates A New Press

MAY these presses perform their duty in the production of a newspaper dedicated to truth, to justice and to public service.

May they help to spread enlightenment and to sustain liberty and ever to increase knowledge of American institutions and reverence for the fundamental principles of individual freedom, universal opportunity and exact equality before the law which are the firm and stable bases of our republic.

May they do their part in the effort of the press and people to maintain the letter and spirit of our Constitution and to protect the rights of the states and the liberties of every citizen.

May they alertly perform the obligation of every patriotic and public spirited journal to defend the nation, not only from the invasion of an enemy in arms, but from the insidious attack of all subversive forces and influences threatening the welfare of our people and the integrity of our free system of government.

May they ever print a newspaper which will reflect the will of the people and which will compel public servants conscientiously to carry out the popular will.

And may the papers these presses print ever deserve the untrammelled freedom in the publication of truthful news and honest opinion which the Constitution confers and which the Fathers, in their wisdom and in their inspiring trust and confidence, bestowed upon a faithful public press.

Reuters' Addis Ababa correspondent today reported more than 250 Italians had died of thirst and fever near Mount Karatchi, in eastern Ethiopia, after continual harassing by savage Danakil tribesmen.

The Italians were said to be almost completely lacking water.

Italian Army Outposts Face Ethiopian Fire

By International News Service.

Rome, Oct. 22—Without waiting for reinforcements from the south, Abyssinian warriors, under cover of darkness, have opened guerilla tactics close to the Italian front line.

Il Tevere's Asmara correspondent today reported serried rifle fire last night on the heights near the Italian advanced posts.

Aerial reconnaissance revealed large encampments of Ethiopians beyond the Takkaze river near Gondar, the dispatch said, but no major groups near the Italian lines.

Airplanes dispersed groups in the Biru zone of the eastern lowlands.

EGYPT READY FOR ATTACK

By International News Service

Cairo, Oct. 22—Details of new military, naval, and air force concentrations throughout Egypt continued to pour into Cairo today, revealing an amazing preparation for attack.

New barracks, new military radio stations, and new harbor defenses are being built as rapidly as possible in places of strategic importance in the Anglo-Italian-Ethiopian crisis.

Alexandria harbor was closed for two hours while the British Mediterranean fleet maneuvered in Agami Bay, just outside the port, for the first time since Egypt was granted independence from Britain.

The British royal air force staged night maneuvers over Alexandria which were unusually impressive. The town was lighted by shafts of light from great searchlights playing upon 30-seater multiple-engined troop planes which flew overhead with 30 men aboard each.

Haile Sees Troops by Plane Hop

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER

International News Service Staff Correspondent

Copyright, 1935, by International News Service

Addis Ababa, Oct. 22—Emperor Haile Selassie went completely air-minded today. Making the first flight of his life, he saw his capital from the air and, soaring westward, he flew over the troops that had departed a week ago for the front.

The prime interest of the Emperor was to inspect the American biplane brought in by the French journalist, Henri De Vilmorin. Gravely Haile Selassie walked around the trim little ship, admired its lines, and then entered the cabin and allowed the pilot, Rene Douillet, to explain the controls.

Then the Emperor alighted and asked to see the ship operate.

DIVES AT EMPEROR

Douillet took her at top speed directly over the Emperor's head, and even the imperial dignity was shaken a bit as the ship dived directly at him then roared upward, almost vertically.

The Emperor smiled and murmured his admiration and amazement, for this was the first time he had ever seen a modern airplane work. All his own are seven years old or more.

Despite his interest in the American plane, the Emperor declined the invitation to ride in a machine not his own, but he proudly ordered out one of the ancient Fokkers sold to him by a Swiss air line eight years ago after it had outlived its usefulness as a passenger carrier.

It was a historic moment for Ethiopia as the Emperor, entering the wheezy vehicle, took to the air for the first time.

CLIMBS UNSTEADILY

The Fokker groaned along a full four hundred yards without getting off the ground, and the spectators' pulse-beats went up swiftly as the clumsy airplane came nearer and nearer to the trees bordering the airport.

Finally, as a crash seemed inevitable, she laboriously climbed enough to miss the trestops by inches.

The Emperor flew in the direction of Dessye, to which he intends to travel, probably by auto, soon.

A little further, he flew over the army and war minister Ras Moulougeta, which departed seven days ago.

Still further on, he soared above the wild tribesmen who had camped in the hills around Addis Ababa a fortnight ago.

After an hour, the emperor returned. Climbing out of the plane, he gave the photographers all the poses they wanted.

TOSSES HAND GRENADES

Before his flight the Emperor motored to his private artillery testing field where for half an hour he threw hand grenades. Six times he tossed them, listening delightedly to the explosion. The emperor trusts no one but himself about him with munitions.

It was believed that as a result of this morning's exercise he will put in a large order for stick grenades.

Shooting cannon, machine guns, and rifles and throwing grenades is almost the only occupation the emperor has which combines business with pleasure. Today he was quite alone except for his guards.

Peace with honor is the only kind of peace the emperor will consider, and no peace will be honorable for Ethiopia as long as Italian troops occupy Ethiopian soil.

SPURNS PEACE PLAN

This point was reiterated to International News Service today. This country is just beginning to fight, Selassie declares.

Eyewitnesses of the vast armies which are pouring through Addis Ababa for the front can have no illusions that the emperor intends accepting any peace incompatible with the full sovereignty of all Ethiopia.

8000 SELASSIE GUARDSMEN OFF TO WAR

Copyright, 1935, by The Associated Press

Addis Ababa, Oct. 22—Eight thousand crack troops of Ethiopia's Imperial Guard marched off to the northeast today to make Dessye the nerve center of Emperor Haile Selassie's line of defense against the Italians.

There, on the Central Plateau in the heart of the empire, Ethiopians believe the Italian northern and southern armies plan to join for a final drive against Addis Ababa.

The Emperor still awaited full reports of an Italian bombing along the Setit river on the northern front and capture by the Italian southern army of the Ethiopian posts of Dagnerot and Sciavell on the Webbe Shibeli river.

Boycott Plea Waits Roosevelt

A reply to the league message will not be dispatched until after the return of President Roosevelt.

Two Society Girls Achieve Success in Stage Bow

COMEDY ROLES FIND FAVOR WITH BOTH

By BETTY Di PESA

Two daughters of Boston made their bow last night in the play at the Colonial Theater, "There's Wisdom in Women."

They were Jane Bancroft and Ruth Weston. And in addition to being Bostonians, both are "society gals" as the saying goes.

Jane is the ex-society girl equestrienne, and hails by way of Beacon Hill and Cohasset.

Miss Weston is a native of Newton, but moved away, as she puts it, "at the tender age of two" to New York.

Comparisons come easy, between the two as both had their thespian beginnings in Junior League shows.

Both do comedy and each feels she'll always do farce. The reasons are interesting.

Didn't Object

We had never known that the requisite of a comedy face was a nose that goes up, but we made a mental note that if such were the fact, we didn't object to a comedy face at all.

Miss Bancroft was also definitely certain that the role of the "comedienne" was her limited lot.

Said Miss Bancroft:

"I've always been cast as a burlesque comedian. And I don't mean 'strip' burlesque.

We asked Miss Bancroft about marriage.

Would she give up the stage when she married?

"It depends on the man," she told us.

Would she combine the two?

"That also depends upon the man."

And then, believing we were being real subtle, we inadvertently and casually queried Miss Bancroft if the "young man" were on the horizon yet.

But we got no more than a single syllable answer.

"No."

And then, with a sudden rush of feeling, Janie went on:

"Besides, who knows how long I'll be on the stage. I'm going to give myself five more years. I may or may not be a success."

We asked if she couldn't tell as yet:

"No, I don't think I've been at it long enough yet to be able to tell anything."

Both of the charming young ladies in question had many relatives in the audience and each admitted the fact made them particularly nervous.

And the most charming part of these charming you-" ladies, we thought, as we interviewed them in their dressing-rooms, was the anxious, not-quite-sure air of each.

Each welcomed her parents with: "Did I do well? Are you sure?"

And despite the assurances of loving parents and friends, we felt that each was a little dubious.

Ambition, that.

FLIERS From Boston DOWN

LAND IN WESTMINSTER

Lost for three hours in a dense fog, two Army fliers from Boston, their gasoline almost exhausted, finally made a forced landing today at the foot of Wachusett mountain in Westminster, 15 miles west of Fitchburg.

Had Lieutenant Alva Marsh of Lynn and Private Robert DeGregorio of East Boston flown another two or three miles west before landing, they probably would have crashed on the mountain and have lost their lives.

In the landing, the plane, making the daily dawn weather flight over Boston, was slightly damaged, according to a telephone report made by the fliers to the Army hangar here from the Westminster farm of Jasper Niemi, where they came down.

Before the plane can be flown back to Boston it will be necessary to take new parts to the farm and make repairs.

Police and the Coast Guard were notified by Army Air Corps attaches at Boston Airport to be on watch for the plane when the fog closed down on the airport early today.

Ordinarily, officials said, the flight every morning, to take weather readings up to 23,000 feet, consumed but a little more than an hour.

The flights are made every day except Sunday as an aid to weather bureau observers in studying upper air conditions.

Father Tells of Child Accidents

By International News Service

Constantly averting his eyes from the burning gaze of his young, black-eyed wife, Schuster told of some horrible "accidents" which befell his child after the stepmother came into their home.

"There was another time—besides the two arm breaks. It was like this: I came home one night and I was going to take my wife to a night ball game. She told me she didn't feel like going, so I went alone.

When I came home, Marilyn, my daughter, was hysterical. My wife told me she had been burned by boiling water when a pot turned over.

"My wife said to me: 'I didn't tell you about this before you went to the game, because I knew that if I did you wouldn't go.'"

Relentlessly, Schueler told how his little girl had suffered two mysterious broken arms in his absence from home. His wife said the child fell down.

"Miss Average B. U. Coed"

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

Here she is—Boston University's "average girl," according to compiled statistics. She's five feet four inches tall, weighs 118 pounds, wears size 16 dress and size four shoes, and prefers blue or green shades in costume material. English is her favorite study, swimming her favorite sport. But she only has time for "two and a half" dates a week, so you'd better phone early.

B. U.'S Late Model CO-ED

TONE, GABLE HER HEROES

Meet the Boston University typical co-ed, 1935-6 model!

She is five feet four inches tall.

She hesitates to choose between Clark Gable and Franchot Tone as her movie hero.

She rates Claudette Colbert and Katharine Hepburn as one-two.

B. U.'s co-ed prefers English to all other studies.

She likes swimming, and swims well.

Miss Average Co-ed has but 2.5 dates per week during the school year (although some girls have as high as 16 per month).

These statistics are the result of several weeks' research by Boston University News, student organ, and represent a cross-section of the Boston University co-ede.

250 Pupils March To Safety in Fire

By Associated Press

New York, Oct. 22—Two hundred and fifty pupils marched to safety from a fire which broke out shortly afternoon today in public school No. 2, the Bronx.

One than 1100 other pupils had been dismissed five minutes before the fire was discovered in an empty classroom on the first floor.

Quincy Drops Hunt for Bodies

Despite the possibility one or more persons may have been drowned, Quincy police said today they would do nothing to recover an automobile believed to have plunged into 150 feet of water in Fallon's quarry.

According to Captain Daniel H. Doran, who was assigned to investigate, it would cost too much to send a diver into the quarry depths.

Police believe, he said, the car, if there is one in the oil-stained waters, may be one driven over to collect its insurance, or a car no longer wanted by the owner.

Residents in the quarry vicinity had two other theories, however.

The first is that the place had been selected as the scene of a gangland execution similar to that in which Thomas "Red" Curran, police informer, was slain three years ago.

The second is that a young couple, unfamiliar with the terrain, had selected the place for a secret tryst and plunged to their deaths in the auto.

3 Girls Run Away in Quest of Fame

Three 15-year-old girls escaped from the Massachusetts Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children headquarters in Mt. Vernon street early today and are believed headed for New York and stage careers.

The girls were awaiting a hearing in juvenile session of municipal court.

Police, notified by officials of the society, asked state police at Framingham barracks and in Rhode Island and Connecticut to watch for them.

The girls might have had a 12-hour lead on their searchers had not their plans for a footlight career been overheard by another in charge of the society, who notified a matron.

According to the story told the matron, one of the trio urged the others to run away with her to New York where they could earn their living on the stage.

The eavesdropper said one girl told of knowing a bus driver who would take them to New York.

Farrar Birthplace Swept by Flames

The birthplace of Geraldine Farrar, Metropolitan opera star, 15 and 17 Fellsview terrace, Melrose, was swept by fire today.

The building was vacant.

The fire, which caused $3000 damage, broke out in the cellar and burned through to the roof of the two-family dwelling. Officials believed it to have been of incendiary origin.

Police said William H. Cutliffe owns the property.

Death Laugh

JOCKEY FACES QUIZ IN GIRL SLAYING

his green auto. Police and sheriffs all along the route from Baltimore to Louisville were watching for the jockey, rider of the 1933 Kentucky Derby winner, Omaha.

It was thought that he might have headed north for New England, where he has been in action at Rockingham, Narragansett and Suffolk Downs. There he has many friends.

NOTIFIED BY PHONE

Saunders and his agent, Elmore "Whitey" Danenhauer, arrived in Baltimore yesterday afternoon in Saunders' green sedan with yellow wire wheels, having driven up from Louisville.

The jockey, who rode Omaha to victory in the Derby and Preakness on successive Saturdays, was scheduled to ride today at Laurel Park for the Headley Stables, to which he is contracted.

According to Danenhauer's story to Baltimore police, Saunders received a long distance telephone call at 7:30 last night in the Emerson Hotel, where they both were registered.

The jockey talked only briefly. Danenhauer said, and then suddenly announced:

"All right then, I'll go back."

DRIVES GREEN AUTO

Offering no explanation, Saunders then told Danenhauer that he had to return to Louisville but would be "back in a couple of days."

He packed his bags, and Danenhauer said he saw him drive away in the green car again. The jockey did not check out of the hotel before leaving, however.

Another long distance call, it was learned today, was received by Duval B. Headley, nephew of Hal Price Headley, at a late hour last night.

The operator at the Hotel Belvedere, where Duval B. Headley is registered, said she refused the call at first, because he had left orders not to be disturbed.

700-MILE RIDE

When the Louisville caller said that the matter was important, however, and concerned a murder, the hotel girl rang Headley and he answered.

The girl said that she did not know any more about the call than that.

Louisville is about 700 miles from Baltimore, and Saunders, in the type of car he was driving, probably would not reach Louisville before noon today—presuming that he intended to go to Louisville—police estimated.

Saunders is 20 years old and comes from Bozeman, Mont. A year ago he, Danenhauer and Wilbur Imig, 23, of Seward, Neb., were held by Pawtucket, R. I., police in connection with the death of a youth alleged to have been struck by Danenhauer's automobile.

Saunders was later held only as a material witness.

Woman's Story of Fatal "Joy Ride"

By Associated Press

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 22—The story of the party that preceded the death of Mrs. Evelyn Sliwinski, 28, was related to police here by Mrs. Agatha Mackison.

She identified a photograph of Willie "Smoky" Saunders as that of Mrs. Sliwinski's companion on the Saturday night party.

Mrs. Mackison was quoted by Detective-Captain Willis McCubbin as saying she, Mrs. Sliwinski, and two men she knew only as "Jimmie Smith" and "Tommy," met in a saloon and visited several night clubs.

"RAN OVER HER TWICE"

"Jimmie" she identified from a photograph of Saunders. "Tommy," she said, spoke Italian fluently. Both spent money freely and talked about racing.

"Jimmie" and Mrs. Sliwinski quarreled, Mrs. Mackison's statement related; he knocked her down, and later resumed the quarrel in the car and ordered her out.

"She walked around in front of the car," Mrs. Mackison's statement to police related. "Tommy, the man I was with, stepped on the gas and ran over Evelyn. We kept going for several miles and turned.

"As we came back about 50 miles an hour we ran over her again. As I felt the wheels pass over her body I screamed.

"'What's the matter with you?' Tommy asked, 'we didn't hit anything; maybe a cat.'

"After we drove a little while longer they stopped and got out and inspected the car. I think they wiped the wheels. Then we started again.

"LUCKY YOU'RE ALIVE"

"Jimmie said, 'Step on it. I think the law's after us.' They took me to my home.

"Just remember this,' they told me. "You ain't seen nothing. You ain't heard nothing; you don't know anything, and you're lucky you're alive."

Mrs. Mackison said she hesitated about telling police, because she was afraid she might be killed.

She described "Tommy" as about 26 years old, 5 feet tall, "speaks Italian exceptionally well," well dressed, driving an automobile with New York license plates.

'Smoky' on His Famous Mount

On his famous mount, Omaha, which he rode to victory in this year's Kentucky Derby, is Jockey Willie "Smokey" Saunders, now sought for questioning in the death of a woman in Louisville, Ky. Saunders has not been seen since he checked out of a Baltimore hotel last night.

Girl, Aged Father Mystery Suicides

By International News Service

New York, Oct. 22—Obvious suicide of a 28-year-old private secretary and death of her aged father today posed a mystery for police.

The body of Miss Gussie Thur, 28, was found fully dressed in the kitchen of her apartment. Gas was escaping from the kitchen range.

A note declaring "I can't stand it any longer," was found nearby. In an adjoining room lay the body of her father, Raphael Thur, aged 86, a widower.

NEW MUSSOLINI PEACE TERMS REVEALED

By FRANK GERVASI

(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service)

Rome, Oct. 22—Premier Mussolini has forwarded to Britain, through Premier Laval of France, proposals for an Italo-Ethiopian peace based on wide territorial acquisitions by Italy, but making a new Italian concession.

Under the plan, Mussolini would be willing to fix the strength of his military forces in Ethiopia at a figure to be agreed on in conference with Britain and France.

Conviction that formal announcement of a "truce" in the Mediterranean between Britain and Italy will be forthcoming shortly was strengthened when the Italian government spokesman declared Sir Eric Drummond, British ambassador to Italy, and Fulvio Suvich, Italian foreign undersecretary, reached "final clad" agreement in conversations here.

Il Duce's new peace plan, communicated to Laval by Italian Ambassador Cerruti, in Paris, was drafted at the French premier's insistence and falls within the "ten-day limit" recently set by Laval. Its main points are an elaboration of the Italian demands outlined by Baron Pompeo Aloisi, Il Duce demands:

1—That Italy be given a full mandate over all Harar, Ogaden, and Somalia provinces in Ethiopia and the sultanate of Aussa.

2—That Italy be given the right to construct a railway linking Eritrea and Italian Somaliland and running west of Addis Ababa.

3—That Ethiopia be given an outlet to the sea only through Italian territory to Assab, Italian port in Eritrea.

4—That Emperor Haile Selassie be permitted to retain sovereignty over ancient Ethiopia, only under control by the League, as outlined in the committee of five's recent compromise report at Geneva.

'Italy Seeks Place in Sun' —Garibaldi

By GENERAL EZIO GARIBALDI (Grandson of the Famous Italian Patriot, Giuseppe Garibaldi)

(Written for the Associated Press)

London, Oct. 22—A very grave international question has been complicated by a misunderstanding between Italy and Great Britain, two countries that always in their long and glorious history have been friends.

But there is never a misunderstanding that cannot be settled; there is never a question so grave that it cannot be solved between men of good will.

The Italian people are conscious of the gravity of the moment, but they are today more than ever united around their leader. They are calm, they have the strength their civilization 3000 years old gives them.

There are 43 million Inhabitants cramped in the country, too small and too poor; they must find their way in the world and no law can deny them their right.

In every law it is necessary to distinguish between the letter and the spirit, and the spirit very often is higher than the letter.

Italians are asking above all that others understand, and who could better be able than the United States to understand this appeal.

It is in fact only justice that Italy wants.

Italy is over-populous and in need of bread and work for her sons. We look for a place in the sun, and we hoped to find it in Africa.

Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press

Addis Ababa, Oct. 22—Emperor Haile Selassie gave a raw meat feast today to 20,000 warriors under the command of Dedjazmatch Abbere Damtou, the governor of Gama and Gofa provinces.

The grounds of his two palaces were insufficient to hold all the men so the Emperor pressed into service a third big field for the gargantuan all-day banquet.

Three hundred and twenty cows were slaughtered in Mosaic fashion. Emperor Haile Selassie, although he himself ate none of the raw meat, presided over the banquet.

The wild-eyed and bushy-haired warriors rose in groups from their squatting postures and rushed excitedly before the Emperor, professing their unwavering loyalty and shouting that they wanted to fight the Italians.

This group of warriors will leave for the front tomorrow morning.

NOTIZIE ODIERNE DELLA GUERRA

By FORMER LIEUTENANT GIOVANNI NANIA

VITTORIE ITALIANE

Secondo le stesse informazioni, i guerrieri abissini, sotto il comando di Dedjasmatch Aystu, incaricato di frontteggiare il settore di centro, nei pressi di Walkait, ad occidente delle armate italiane del nord, sono divenute impazienti ed hanno sferrato un furioso attacco, subitamente respinto dalle forze italiane. Lo stesso Aystu sarebbe rimasto gravemente ferito.

Da Mogadiscio, Somalia Italiana, informano che dopo un furioso attacco a corpo a corpo, sostenuto con indomito coraggio, le truppe fasciste hanno catturato il forte di Burdoti, penetrando all'ala destra dell'armata al comando del generale Rodolfo Graziani, di avanzare ancora e di puntare direttamente su Gorrahai, l'importante citta' che controlla il traffico sul fiume Fafan.

Il generale Graziani considera la cattura di Dagnerei e di Burdoti come molto importante per la sonora sezione imposta alle forze abissine che da settimane si trovano si erano preparate a sostenere l'attacco.

PROFONDE DI FACE

Si ha da Roma che il Presidente Mussolini, servendosi della mediazione del Primo Ministro Francese, Pierre Laval, ha fatto pervenire all'Inghilterra una proposta di pace basata su larghe concessioni territoriali.

Tale proposta, comunicata a Lavil dall ambaciatore italiano a Parigi, e' stata formulata— secondo quanto si assicura—dietro l'insistenza del Primo Ministro Francese e contiene le seguenti domande:

4—Che all'Imperatore Haile' Selassie' sia permesso di mantenere la sovranita' sopra l'antica Etiopia, soltanto sotto il controllo della Lega delle Nazioni, conf' come ha proposto il Comitato dei 5 col rapporto recentemente emesso a Ginevra.

Da Londra invece si ha notizia che il Presidente Mussolini avrebbe avanzato una nuova proposta di pace ma che i termini della proposta differiscono sostanzialmente da quelli segnalati nel comunicato di Roma. Secondo Londra la proposta contiene le seguenti domande:

NEUTRALITA' BRITANNICA

Sir Eric Drummond, ambasciatore inglese a Roma, e stato incaricato dal suo governo d'informare il Presidente Mussolini che la Gran Bretagna, le sue colonie ed il Sudan Anglo-Egiziano hanno deciso di adottare lo stato di neutralita' e di mandare in effetto le norme che regolano il movimento portuale in riguardo alle navi belligerenti.

In conseguenza di tale decisione, le navi da guerra italiane ed i trasporti con carichi di xiveri, acqua, armi, etc., destinati alle truppe italiane nell'Africa Orientale, non potranno fermarsi nei porti britannici per piu' di 24 ore e non potranno fornirsi di carbone piu' di tovaglie piu' di quanto non sia necessario per giungere fino al prossimo porto.

E' attesa per oggi, alle 3 p. m. la riunione del Parlamento Britannico che trattera' la situazione internazionale. Si attendono con enorme interesse le dichiarazioni del Segretario degli Esteri, Sir Samuel Hoare, sui progressi delle discussioni tra Roma, Parigi e Londra in relazione alle varie proposte di pace.

ETHIOPIAN TROOPS RIVAL SPARTANS

Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press

Addis Ababa, Oct. 22—Ethiopian troops rival the Spartans of old in their privations and sacrifices. If wounded seriously, they die on the spot where they fall unless comrades rescue them from death or from the jackals and hyenas which prowl by night.

In camp, Ethiopian warriors sleep as many as seven to 10 in a single dog tent. At the front, they sleep on the ground.

As the Ethiopian army has no commissary, one principal activity of the soldiers is foraging for food. They are assisted by their wives and servants, who follow the armies like hosts of locusts, stripping the countryside of all edibles.

WOMEN GO TO BATTLE

The soldiers are fond of stirring ballads which recite the exploits of valor of Ethiopian armies.

The troops have no bands, but mere curious barrel-shaped drums and long trumpets.

The only physical care the hardened Ethiopian warriors seem to require is for their feet.

As they march barefooted day ated by stones and thorns. After the splinters and other foreign bodies are removed, their wives and other camp followers dress the warafter day over thorny, rocky, burning ground, their feet become secretions' feet with goats' tallow, poursal boiling hot into the wounds.

Ethiopian soldiers eat only once a day, usually in the morning. If food is plentiful; if scarce, they eat at night.

All camps have priests. Many fight beside the soldiers, especially now that the Ethiopians consider their conflict with the Italians a holy war after the capture of the sacred city of Aksum on the northern front.

LAVAL REPORTS TO CABINET

By Associated Press

Paris, Oct. 22—Premier Laval told his Cabinet today of his efforts to negotiate peace between Italy and Ethiopia, and it was officially indicated that the possibility of modifying Premier Mussolini's suggestions would be considered at a full-dress ministerial council tomorrow.

Today's Cabinet session was largely devoted to France's own financial and political problems. The premier announced decrees for the strict control of public demonstrations and the private possession of arms. The decrees are intended to check fights between political forces, and will be offered the Cabinet later for approval.

Laval was officially described as "a sort of buffer" between Great Britain and Italy.

ATTACK ON CONSTITUTION TAUGHT HARVARD STUDENTS

BRITISH RADICAL'S TEXT REQUIRED OF FRESHMEN

By ALAN C. FRAZER

(Copyright, 1935, by the Boston Evening American)

The Constitution—a Frankenstein monster.
The American Revolution—stolen from the masses.

* * *

That is what is taught at Harvard.

As in referring to Scripture one quotes chapter and verse, so in dealing with Harvard we specify course and volume.

The course is Government I, largest Freshman course, and the book is D. W. Brogan's "Government of the People."

This book, with its title fashioned out of fine irony, is required reading in the course.

"If you read no other book," said Professor Arthur N. Holcombe, head of the course, to one student, "read this one."

Professor Harold J. Laski sponsors it.

Laski Assailed For Red Leanings

Professor Laski is the man who resigned as instructor at Harvard 15 years ago, after being assailed for alleged radical tendencies.

He became a storm center because of an address in Boston, in which he went to extremes in behalf of the striking Boston policemen.

For more than a decade connected with the London School of Economics, and a figure in the English Labor party, he returned to the United States last spring, and at Ford Hall Forum defended John Strachey, British Communist, against whom the government had brought deportation proceedings.

Brogan is an instructor in the Department of Political Science at the London School of Economics. One product of this school is now a leader in the National Students' League, a radical organization, and was deported from England for Communist activities.

"Whimsical Monster" Strangles Thought

Hailed at Harvard as "the successor to Viscount Bryce," whose book "The American Commonwealth" was for years the main reliance of Harvard professors in teaching the government of our country, Brogan has this to say of our fundamental law:

That is, it was laden with double meanings, craftily, slyly and by design.

And he continues:

"It is a skeleton which custom, the exigencies of party warfare, national emergencies, economic developments, have clothed with flesh and which national faith and love have imbued with life, till today the Constitution is a Frankenstein's monster to whose existence and eccentricities the American people have become so used that it is difficult for most of them to think themselves out of their inherited political atmosphere into the freer and less secure world in which other peoples have to live their political lives."

In other words, patriotism, politics and undue regard for American traditions have made the Constitution an unreasoning and whimsical monster that strangles independent thought.

And the American Revolution, according to this textbook, was another orgy of the type of the French and Russian revolutions, except that the masses were checked at the psychological moment by the properties gentlemen.

In Brogan's view, as it is handed out to the Harvard students, our Revolution did not reach the object that the people intended when the English yoke was destroyed, but was halted at that point because the "ingenious gentlemen" so desired.

Fathers Feared Poor Would Rob Rich

"The American Constitution," he asserts, "is a specimen of a very rare historical achievement, the stopping of a revolution at the point most convenient for its original sponsors.

"The dream of all political innovators, the saying to the people 'thus far and no further,' and the inducing of sobriety in the masses stirred out of their usual passivity, was achieved by the ingenious gentlemen whom President Harding called the 'founding fathers.'

"The ingenious gentlemen who framed and put into operation the American Constitution, performed a feat of extraordinary difficulty.

"In the first ebb of a revolution, they hastily proceeded to put a hook into the nose of Leviathan and induced him to make a covenant with his new masters, a covenant that the monster has kept till he has forgotten his old liberty and the strength that would break his chain.

"The constitution was their way of digging themselves in, of consolidating their personal and class gains. It is, as it was intended to be, a conservative instrument, a happier Directory, a Consulate without a Bonaparte, or, to take a closer parallel, it was a spiritual child of the English Revolution in 1688.

"The fathers regarded mere democracy as certain to be, sooner or later, an instrument of social and economic changes of a deeply revolutionary kind.

"They had no comforting liberal illusions that the people could be given all political power, without a danger, or a certainty, that they would rob the rich.

End of Chance For Advancement Seen

"The Federal Constitution attempts to impede this action by distributing power widely among inharmonious bodies, by creating barriers which, it was hoped, would counter the weight of mere numbers and, finally, by attempting to prevent certain contemporary revolutionary practices from becoming habits . . .

"It has shown its temper in the comparative ease with which it has been adapted to the needs of the rich and the astonishing difficulty with which it has been twisted into an instrument of the needs or wants of the poor."

The survival of this "old-fashioned garment" is due cause for surprise, the author finds.

Professor Laski, in his foreword, states that he sees the approaching end of an era in which Americans of humble origin have a chance of advancement.

Truck Rips Fence

Skidding on the approach to the Longfellow Bridge, Cambridge, today, Dominic Capone, 30, of Florence avenue, Somerville, narrowly escaped death when his truck ripped up the fence for a distance of 40 feet. Capone wasn't hurt.

Here, on Page 15 of Dr. Brogan's "Government of the People," the British radical writer gives his views on America's "Frankenstein" Constitution and the "ingenious gentlemen" who inspired it.

The constitution is a brief document, a model of elegant and, in places, artfully ambiguous draughtsmanship. It is a skeleton which custom, the exigencies of party warfare, national emergencies, economic developments, have clothed with flesh and which national faith and love have imbued with life till to-day the constitution is a Frankenstein's monster to whose existence and eccentricities the American people have become so used that it is difficult for most of them to think themselves out of their inherited political atmosphere into the freer and less secure world in which other peoples have to live their political lives.
The A...can ...nstitution ...cimen ...ery r...
...rogan was given as the essential clue to that understanding.
The Constitution he describes is one in which, behind the abstract formulæ, can be discerned a clear effort to protect a certain view of property from invasion by the demands of the multitude. That such an attitude should so long have gone unquestioned is due, I think, above all to two things : it is due, in the first place, to the skill with which, behind the formal façade, the actual working of the Constitution has been adapted ceaselessly to new needs ; and it has been due, in the second place, to the fact that America has genuinely been, to a degree unknown in Western Europe, the land of opportunity for the comparatively humble man. The two causes have, of course, been closely related, and they explain its greatness ...ago.

NEW CITY HALL SITE OPPOSED IN COUNCIL

If, and when, Boston gets a new City Hall, it will undoubtedly be built on the present School street site.

At least, the city council went on record to that effect after it was pointed out by Councilor James F. Finley of Roslindale that a new location would be too costly to buy.

The council failed to take action on a loan order submitted by Mayor Mansfield for $60,000 to pay the architect.

After much discussion, it was decided by the council that zoning law restrictions prevented the issuance of a permit to the Oliver Ames American Legion Post to stage a show and dance at their quarters, Longwood and Brookline avenues.

Officials of the post said they would defy police and city officials and hold the entertainment, permit or no permit, on Thursday night.

Although demands were made that the Boston public library trustees discharge all employes who are not residents of Boston, nothing can be done by the council or Mayor Mansfield.

Councilors Robert Gardiner Wilson, Jr., and John F. Dowd demanded the removal of James W. Kenney of Waterhouse street, Somerville, from his $7000 a year post as comptroller of the library. It was found that neither the mayor nor the council has jurisdiction.

When the loan order for $673,000 to purchase new snow removal equipment was again put over without action, city officials said that it might become necessary to advertise for bids for the equipment without waiting for final passage.

'Upside Down Jimmy' to Be Doctor

San Jose, Cal., Oct. 22—Jimmy Neilson, California boy who went across the continent last spring to have his inverted stomach righted, wants to become a doctor.

Supplied with the sports equipment he could not use before his operation, the 13-year-old boy is trying to make up for lost time at his home near here.

"I'd like to be a doctor some day," said Jimmy, who has not had a day's illness since Dr. Philemon Truesdale operated upon him in Fall River.

The boy, who is gaining weight rapidly and eating whatever he desires, said he had not heard for several weeks from Alyce Jane McHenry, Omaha girl, who underwent a similar operation.

Baron Carson, of Ulster, Dies

Minster, Kent, England, Oct. 22—Baron Carson, who, as Sir Edward Carson, fought long for separation of Ulster from Ireland, noted Irish statesman, former First Lord of the Admiralty and member of the war cabinet without portfolio in 1917-18, died today at his Cleve Court home. He was 81 years old.

A native of Dublin, but a bitter opponent to any break between Ireland and England, Baron Carson had been in failing health for several weeks, suffering chronic lymphatic leukemia.

It was his second serious illness in 12 months.

Crew of 15 Feared Lost

Koenigsberg, Germany, Oct. 22 (AP)—The German freighter Insterburg of 865 gross tons and her crew of 15 were feared lost today during the week-end gale over the North and Baltic seas.

'Prisoner of the OGPU'

By GEORGE KITCHIN

CHAPTER 30

During the week he hoped to inspect all divisions, to transfer the sick prisoners to the base, to turn over the work to the assistant doctor who was to be sent over from Solvychegodsk, and only after that to return to Kotlas.

"Tomorrow I shall not permit half the men to be ordered out to work," the doctor exclaimed. "None of these half-dressed unfortunates will be driven out to work until they get some warm clothes, if I can help it.

"Today 22 of them returned frostbitten. One man in particular is in a dreadful condition—the soles of both his feet are frostbitten, he cannot walk.

"I am sure that tomorrow I shall have quite a clash with Aaronovich."

The doctor continued to write. His fine, high-strung features were clouded and serious. I stretched out and tried to sleep.

I was awakened by the deep bass voice of Aaronovich. He was talking to the doctor.

"But, doctor," he said, "be reasonable and do not exaggerate. You cannot call these men sick; the majority of them are just slackers, trying to be let off from work. You simply cannot treat them humanely.

"If you pay attention to every complaint you will find that pretty soon none of them will work at all. And I am required to fulfill a definite program.

"Judge for yourself, what else can I do? Come, let us better drown our sorrows and have a drink."

The doctor refused.

"As you like, doctor," Aaronovich continued. "But you are making a mistake by even giving them hope. Tomorrow I shall send them all out to work again, just the same. I am looking after number one first."

The tone of his voice was sharp and confident. There was no trace of the affable geniality he had shown that morning.

The doctor lost his temper.

"Look here, Aaronovitch," he said, "you are the commander of the base and you are responsible for the condition of the prisoners. One does not have to be a doctor in order to see that the majority of your prisoners are sick. The thing you are doing here is a crime.

"Please realize that you are now in the very thick of a typhus epidemic. If you do not take precautionary measures at once, all the prisoners will be sick by next spring. Can you understand it now?"

"This is all quite clear, my dear doctor," answered Aaronovich with a growing insolence in his voice, "but you forget the instructions of Commander Boksha: 'to fulfil the plan, no matter at what cost.' And I shall fulfil it. Tomorrow all those will go out to work whom I shall order to do so, and we are not going to consult you about it at all."

The doctor jumped up excitedly and started pacing the room and heaping abuse on Aaronovich. I was sleepy, but he sought my advice and could not calm down.

Our conversation was interrupted by Zakhariantz, who came in from the outside, rubbing the frost from his glasses and squinting in the bright light of the room. He stepped up to the table.

"What is this I hear, doctor, about your little tiff with Aaronovich. This isn't right. He is a very valuable worker, strict but efficient. His work is progressing in very good shape . . ."

"At the expense of the dead," interjected the doctor.

"Oh, you see, that is not so important," continued Zakhariantz in the kindly tone of a man who has had too much to drink.

"We do not build the revolution with kid gloves. There must be sacrifices and if so, rather let the enemies of the revolution be sacrificed. The export plan must be completed an dit will be completed even if it costs the lives of thousands.

"Have you really not yet come to understand that we are not afraid of the dead? For us the herd of humanity is but the manure for fertilising the fields of socialism."

Like all chekists, Zakhariantz liked to use high-sounding phrases. He started his speech in a kindly tone of voice but ended it with loud gusto.

Millions to Spend

YOUNGSTERS SEEK ONLY JOBS, BUT NONE ARE FOUND

By JOHN H. NOONAN and ALAN C. FRAZER

(Copyright, 1935, by the Boston Evening American)

And now the National Youth Administration, which announced such high-sounding plans a little while ago, admits it is completely puzzled about how to spend that $50,000,000.

For the aid of high school and college students, $27,000,000 of this fund has been set aside. Of course, they have not been aided yet, but time will bring them assistance.

The remainder of the fund is intended for youth improvement, for aiding youth to find itself, for helping youth to get a start in industry, for developing talent—for many another vague end, which sounds well but does not stand examination.

Williams Worried

Aubrey Williams, national director of the Youth Administration, admits that he is bewildered about how to go about helping youth to find itself—about helping even one youth to find himself. And there are 6,000,000 youths, unemployed, between the ages of 16 and 25, that the National Youth Administration plans to help.

"They want jobs—except some, who are looking for world revolution," said Director Williams.

"But when the question arose of finding them jobs, there was the fact that there were not jobs enough for men with dependents.

"There was talk of developing apprenticeships in various trades. But in one trade we find that 60 per cent of the qualified operatives are already unemployed.

"We don't know where to turn. The only way out that I see is something for cultural expansion and increasing our natural resources, like the CCC."

He vaguely suggests the use of gymnasiums in churches and schools to develop a youth program.

The social service crowd have a plan for him. It consists of "work orientation, the pointing of the way for youth to new and broader fields of activity."

It embraces "youth centers for education and recreation, forums, and a pageant to show the people the high spots of youth activity."

And incidentally to show the people how $50,000,000 is being spent.

Massachusetts' unemployed wait for the promised help through the WPA, while the sociologists dream out ways to spend huge sums for boys and girls who really want jobs in business, trade and industry.

Crash That Hurt Ruth Nichols, Killed Pilot

(Picture from International News Photograph service)

JAIL TERM FOR HARVARD MAN

Weld Arnold, 40, of Divinity avenue, Cambridge, a Harvard instructor, was sentenced today in East Cambridge District Court to one month in the House of Correction, after conviction for an alleged second offense of drunken driving.

In addition, Arnold was given a two-months suspended sentence on a charge of driving away after causing injury to a person, and paid a fine of $50 on a charge of driving dangerously. He appealed neither fine nor sentence.

Charges of drunkenness and leaving the scene of an accident after causing property damage were filed.

Arnold was arrested October 11 after his car had collided with a packed car. The second machine was driven onto the sidewalk at Tremont and Hampshire streets, Cambridge, striking Ernest Champion, 16, of 260 Norfolk street, Cambridge, who suffered a broken left leg.

CLOUTIER BARS WOMAN JUROR

Alfred, Me., Oct. 22—Nine jurors were speedily chosen before the first recess today at start of Alexander Cloutier's trial on a charge of slaying, because of unrequited love, a girl who was "like a sister to him."

The only woman in the venire called, Mrs. Lottie Ricker of Waterboro, foreman of one of the regular panels, was challenged by the defense.

The York County courthouse was jammed to capacity as Cloutier, accused of beating to death Florence Grenier, 17, his sister's friend, was brought handcuffed from the county jail.

The girl disappeared between the Grenier and Cloutier homes in Biddeford on August 20. Her body, the head battered in, was found two days later buried in a dump.

Lack of $1.25 Balks Oath Law's Foes

Fourteen students, representing five colleges and universities, met at Harvard yesterday to start the drive, but broke up the gathering 15 minutes later for lack of $1.25.

Today's session will be along the same line, but with only Harvard students present. Several faculty members have been invited.

NICHOLS CRASH PROBE OPENS

By International News Service

Troy, N. Y., Oct. 22—The United States Department of Commerce today started an investigation to ascertain whether the plane crash here yesterday in which Miss Ruth Nichols, noted society flier, was gravely injured, and her pilot, Captain Harry Hublitz, fatally hurt, was avoidable.

Jack Sommers, federal investigator, who arrived by plane last night, is questioning the five surviving members of the plane's crew, as well as airport observers.

Shortly before noon Miss Nichols condition was said to be "fair." She has recovered complete consciousness. Her brother, and Clarence Chamberlain, owner of the destroyed plane, visited her this morning.

"We will have to wait another 24 hours," said Dr. Emmett Howd, attending physician, "before we know for certain whether Miss Nichols will recover. She is cheerful and we hope for the best."

FACTS

Universal Service

Washington, Oct. 21—PWA has bought the Potomac Park Apartments here—a modern apartment house—paying $500,000 for it.

About 100 apartment occupants are being ordered out.

PWA will convert it into an office building.

The offices will be occupied by PWA economists, statisticians and engineers who work upon government plans to relieve housing shortages.

3 DIE IN CUBA HURRICANE

Sweeping up from the Island of Jamaica where it caused damage estimated at $2,500,000, the hurricane, accompanied by torrential rains, wrecked buildings and lifted roofs in Santiago, filling the streets with debris.

The city's electric light and power were cut off when the power plant's roof was ripped loose, while there was a scarcity of bread and milk.

A message to Havana from Antilla, in Oriente Province, said the steamship Cuba had been forced to put in there.

White Girl Held With 3 Chinese

Three Chinese men and a white woman were arrested early today in a spectacular raid by police of the Back Bay station on a Queensbury street apartment, in which 24 containers of alleged dope were found.

Aroused by numerous complaints about the apartment occupied by two of the men, Sergeant George Hayes lead a squad of officers to the house.

BOSTON CONSOLIDATED GAS COMPANY

CLASHES MARK SABATH BOND HEARING; BIGELOW ON STAND

Marked by frequent clashes between witnesses and examining counsel, the Sabath congressional committee resumed its investigation at the Federal Building today into losses suffered by bond-holders of the Boston Metropolitan Building Corporation.

At one point Robert G. Dodge, counsel for the building firm, asserted "insinuations of dishonesty on the part of the directors were being made repeatedly and without foundation."

Congressman Sabath of Illinois, chairman of the committee, replied with a charge that the prospectus of the reorganization plan sent to bondholders deceived investors and quoted an agreement which, he said, if known to the bondholders would have resulted in withdrawal of their investments.

Prescott Bigelow, a member of the board of directors of the building firm and also connected with Hayden M. Stone Co., one of the firms which underwrote the defaulted bonds, was the first witness of the day.

His testimony was interrupted by Chairman Sabath's suggestion that the new directors were chosen because of the effect their names would have in promoting the bond issue.

"An instance of that practice was the naming of James Roosevelt, son of the President, to the board," he said.

"James Roosevelt didn't know anything about this deal, and it is such instances as these that cause me to describe the whole affair as reprehensible."

Bigelow retorted:

"You are 100 per cent wrong in this case. There is not a man on the board of directors or the bondholders' committee who is not representing an interest.

"There's not a man who is not cognizant of his duty and what he is going to do."

Bigelow said the old board of directors of Boston Metropolitan Buildings had withdrawn voluntarily.

Peter C. Borre, special counsel for the Sabath committee, brought up the minority stockholders' suit which, the company settled, with Paramount Public paying a like sum, for $25,000, the total of $50,000 going entirely to counsel for the plaintiffs.

It was asserted that the litigant in the suit had owned a small amount of preferred stock in the company only a few days before beginning action.

When Borre concluded his remarks about the suit, Sabath said:

Thug Victim in Hospital

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

MRS. EMILY STERLING

Beaten and robbed by a powerful desperado, Mrs. Emma Sterling, 50, of Morton street, Mattapan, was taken to City Hospital today in a serious condition.

Her confessed assailant, seized a few minutes after the attack, was lodged in Station 19, Mattapan, charged with robbery and attempted attack.

There, the suspect was viewed by officers from Dudley street, Roxbury Crossing and Back Bay stations, who have been searching for months for a handbag thief and burglar in these districts.

Police said Mrs. Sterling, a divorcee, returned home after midnight and was about to enter a rear door when she was seized from behind.

Her cries aroused the neighborhood and residents began pouring from their homes when the assailant, felling her with a blow, grabbed her purse and fled.

A few minutes later Joseph R. Atkins, 23, Negro, of Harold street, Roxbury, was seen hurrying along Harvard street near Blue Hill avenue by Patrolmen Arthur Reeves and Joseph Maloney.

He was questioned concerning scratches on his face and confessed he had robbed and attempted to attack the woman.

SALEM-PEABODY STRIKERS END WALKOUT

Salem, Oct. 22—Settlement of the 10 weeks' strike of 2100 employes of the Naumkeag Steam Cotton Company here and in Peabody was achieved today.

Workers will return in about a week to all departments of the Pequot Mills tomorrow and to the bleachery, which is fed by the mills.

Strikers won their demand for changes in working conditions and for recognition of the union, the Independent Sheeting Workers of America.

They earlier dropped their demand for a 25 per cent wage increase. Under the agreement reached today they may take a wage reduction of 11 1-5 per cent if an audit of company books shows it to be necessary. Fred M. Knight, investigating agent for the state board of conciliation, will make the decision in two weeks.

The return to work will be on the same wage rate, but on a 40-hour week instead of a three-day shift. There will be only two shifts and no stretch-out system.

CRITICS CONFER ON FATE OF ADVOCATE

Cambridge and Middlesex officials are to confer today on action against the alleged obscene articles in the September issue of the Harvard Advocate.

The meeting is scheduled for 5 p. m. today in the office of District Attorney Warren L. Bishop.

Assistant District Attorney Frank G. Volpe will represent Bishop while Chief Timothy F. Leahy of the Cambridge police will present the views of his department.

Three student editors, said to be responsible for the publication of the offending articles, are also to be present.

They are J. J. Slocum, '35, of Charlestown, president of the Advocate; G. Piel, '37, of Salisbury, Ct., business manager, and R. S. Chaffee, '36, of Cambridge, circulation manager.

It was intimated that the subject to be discussed today would be the banning of further publication of the Advocate in Cambridge, but this was not confirmed.

Two articles, "Glittering Pie," by Henry V. Miller, a non-Harvard contributor, and "A Natural History," by James Laughlin, '36, were the source of the trouble.

WOOL IMPORTS SHOW BIG JUMP

Rising wool importations are writing prosperity across New England's business books, Joseph A. Maynard, collector of the port, announced today.

Wool imports last week totalled 1,410,000 pounds, compared with 379,968 pounds for the corresponding week a year ago, bringing receipts for the fiscal year up to 16,892,118, or 700,000 pounds more than for the preceding 12-month period.

Collector Maynard said imports last week totalled $880,881 in duties compared with $393,920 for the same week last year. The year, to date, shows a gain of $2,085,518 over the corresponding period last year.

$400 Phone Cash Taken in Haverhill

Haverhill, Oct. 22—The $ of $400 in 46 bags, representing collections from Haverhill telephone users, and of a green sedan was reported by the Haverhill branch of the New England Telephone Company today.

Police broadcast a description of the car by teletype to all sections of the State.

2 Negroes Confess Killing Girl

Columbus, Tex., Oct. 22—Sheriff Frank Hoegmeyer said today two Negro youths confessed to him that they had attacked and killed Miss Geraldine Kollman, 19, whose body was found in a creek Thursday.

Sheriff Hoegmeyer said the Negroes made a full confession to the attack and slaying.

Danes Bar A Shirley Temple Film!

SHIRLEY TEMPLE

Under Denmark Ban

Hollywood, Oct. 22—It seems hardly possible, but Denmark censors, so Hollywood was told today, have barred a motion picture in which the star was Shirley Temple.

Mrs. George Temple, Shirley's mother, said she heard of it when a London newspaper called her for comment.

Child Strangled by Autumn Leaves

By International News Service

Troy, N. Y., Oct. 22—For the second time in 48 hours crisp autumn leaves have caused the death of a child near here.

James Spiller, seven, strangled to death after furrowing under a two-foot pile of leaves.

Two days ago an Albany boy was killed when an automobile passed over the pile of leaves in which he was hiding.

$1000-AN-HOUR PACE SET IN JEWISH DRIVE

Boston's Associated Jewish Philanthropies are moving along at better than $1000 an hour in the drive for $550,000, it was announced at the luncheon of the workers held today at 110 Federal street.

The drive was opened Sunday night with $279,757 subscribed at the first meeting. Today General Chairman Sidney Rabinowitz was informed that an additional $30,455 had been subscribed, the fund now totalling $300,212.

The 1200 men who have volunteered their services are divided into a "green" army, under "Colonel" Samuel Markell; a "blue" army, under "Colonel" Charles F. Cohen, and a "brown" army under "Colonel" Samuel Ginsburg.

Gabriel M. Stern, chairman of the Trades organizations division, announced prizes would be given for the highest daily collection scores.

One thousand women members are also organized into solicitation groups, and many were among the 200 present at today's luncheon.

Guests of honor included Lee Whitney, prima donna of "The Great Waltz" at the Boston Opera House, and Frances Maddux and Bette Lawford, from the cast of "There's Wisdom in Women" at the Colonial.

At tomorrow's luncheon, Casper N. Grosberg, treasurer of the organized drive, will be the principal speaker, with Cohen and Dunn, appearing at the Metropolitan, as guests of honor.

Scores of women, under Mrs. Hyman Freiman, have abandoned their household tasks to lend every effort to exceed the women's division quota of $102,000.

In order to facilitate the returns of the women's division, two headquarters have been established. One is in the Temple Ohabei Shalom, Beacon and Kent streets, Brookline, for the Brookline-Brighton workers, and the other is located at the Boston Y. M. H. A., 108 Beaver street, for Roxbury canvassers.

Roosevelt Ship Outraces Gale

Aboard the U. S. S. Houston, En Route to the United States, Oct. 22—President Roosevelt's ship, having apparently outraced the Caribbean hurricane, today prepared to make a direct run to Charleston, S. C., for anchorage late tonight. The original schedule called for his arrival at Charleston tomorrow.

Finding clear weather and slightly milder seas after a run through gales last night, President Roosevelt determined upon faster speed—20 knots—and the end of the cruise tonight.

No concern was felt today over the slow-moving hurricane astern, but the President decided to take advantage of th quiet waters off Charleston for the last night of a three-week sea holiday.

The President will go ashore at Charleston tomorrow afternoon, and possibly make a talk there before boarding a special train for his return to the White House Thursday morning.

"Buy American" Beano

Anyone conducting beano games and offering prizes not manufactured in the United States, would be subject to a $500 fine under terms of a bill filed today by Representative Albert Rubin of Fall River.

MY, HOW I ENVY YOU! ISN'T IT GRAND YOU CAN AFFORD TO USE CRISCO FOR EVERYTHING?

MARGE, HAVEN'T YOU CHECKED UP ON SHORTENING PRICES LATELY? WHY, CRISCO IS THE BEST VALUE NOW. WHY DON'T YOU USE CRISCO IN YOUR CAKES, PIES AND FRIED FOODS? IT IMPROVES THEM ALL.

Her husband's digestion worried her . . . "then Crisco turned the trick," WRITES MRS. KNIGHT

My husband is a nervous, hard-pressed man, and he suffered from indigestion. It was worse after eating fried foods.

He was growing thin and irritable, and fast assuming the disposition of a dispatcher. In desperation I decided to try Crisco. It turned the trick, needless to say!

Now, when he comes home late and dog-tired, he says, "Mama, how about a little snack before we go to bed?" He almost always wants a fried concoction. And you should see him now. He looks almost like the answer to a maiden's prayer, especially my prayer, thanks to Crisco.

Yours very truly
MRS. L. C. KNIGHT*

*Original letter in our files.

DOES somebody's health worry you? —someone who says fried foods are too greasy—or that cakes are too heavy—or that pies don't digest quickly!

LISTEN! You can make these very foods lusciously light with light digestible Crisco. It is the creamed vegetable shortening!

Crisco is so creamy-light that Crisco cakes puff up in feathery pride—so think what it will mean to your pies and fried foods if you make them just as marvelous with this same pure light Crisco!

Luck's with you today, Crisco is the best value in shortenings! It hasn't gone 'way up in price the way ordinary shortenings have. In fact, Crisco in the big thrifty 3-lb. can is today's best value in quality shortenings and cooking fats.

Try pure digestible Crisco in that thrifty 3-lb. size . . . so you can make many feathery cakes, luscious pies and crispy fried foods!

Note CRISCO'S MODERATE PRICE The big thrifty 3-lb. can brings you today's best value in shortening

CRISCO For Frying For Shortening For Cake Making

WINIFRED S. CARTER

PEACHY PIE

light fluffy Crisco for light digestible pastry!

6 to 10 yellow peaches
1 tablespoon lemon juice
¾ cup sugar
2 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup chopped almonds
Digestible Crisco Pastry

Slice pared peaches. Add lemon juice. Mix dry ingredients, including almonds. Mix with peaches. Line pie plate with flaky digestible Crisco Pastry (see below). Brush bottom with melted Crisco. Add fruit. Roll out top crust ⅛ inch thick. Cut in strips and make criss-cross top. Bake in hot oven (450° F.) 10 minutes, then reduce to moderate (350° F.). Bake 20 to 25 min. longer.

Digestible Crisco Pastry: Sift 2 cups flour with 1 teaspoon salt. Cut in ⅔ cup of light digestible Crisco. Add 6 to 8 tablespoons cold water, using only enough to hold mixture together. Roll out on lightly floured board.

CHOCOLATE STAR CAKE

½ cup Crisco
1¼ cups sugar
3 eggs (save two whites)
2¼ squares chocolate, melted
2 cups flour
1 teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup shredded coconut
1¼ cups thick sour milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 teaspoon baking powder

Blend Crisco (the fluffy creamed shortening) with sugar, one whole egg, two egg yolks. Beat light. Add melted chocolate, soft dry ingredients, stir in coconut. Add to Crisco mixture alternately with sour milk. Add vanilla. Mix well. Pour into two 9"Criscoed" layer-cake pans (9 inch). Bake in moderate oven (350° F.) 25 min. Cool.

Star Icing: Put 1½ cups sugar, ½ cup water, ¼ teaspoon salt, 2 unbeaten egg whites to cook over boiling water. Beat 7 minutes while icing is cooking. Remove from hot water. Add ½ teaspoon vanilla. Beat until thick. Frost cake. Grate ½ square of chocolate over top before icing completely cools.

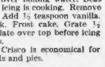
CARROTS O'CRISCO

wholesome and greaseless, fried with digestible Crisco



8 large carrots
1 small green pepper
1 pimiento
4 tablespoons Crisco
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 teaspoons lemon juice

Parboil carrots in boiling salted water. Don't let them get soft. Chill in cold water, remove skins. Cut in long narrow strips. Silver green pepper. Pan-fry pepper and carrots in hot Crisco (the wholesome vegetable fat). Then add slivered pimiento, salt, pepper, lemon juice. Cook 1 minute longer.

All Measurements Level. Crisco is the registered trademark of a shortening manufactured by the Procter & Gamble Co.

Begin Probe of Bonfils' $350,000 Deal

Washington, Oct. 22—Investigation of the $350,000 payment by an official of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey to the late Frederick G. Bonfils, publisher of the Denver Post, allegedly to influence his editorial policies, was launched by the Federal Trade Commission.

Standard of New Jersey attorneys were called into conferences both yesterday morning and afternoon with FTC officials following the disclosure that the huge payment was made allegedly to overcome the Bonfils opposition to a pending gas rate ordinance which would have allowed Standard to deliver natural gas into Denver.

CHANCE TO CHALLENGE

The conference was ordered to afford Standard an opportunity, at its option, to challenge or explain the transfer of the cash, understood to have been discovered by Lewis B. Prichard, FTC examiner, in an investigation of the operations of the Colorado Interstate Company, Standard subsidiary.

Following the conference, Colonel W. H. England, FTC's assistant chief economist, announced:

"The payment and all circumstances surrounding it will be gone into at a public hearing before the commission October 28."

W. H. Dougherty and F. H. Lorch of Standard's New York legal staff carried into the conference copies of the Washington Herald publishing the dispatch.

NO MORE TO SAY

Asked for comment, Dougherty ran a finger down the dispatch and re-read this paragraph:

"Officials of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey likewise declined comment."

Emphatically, he added:

"That is positively all we have to say."

Facing the two lawyers across a table at the conference were Prichard, England, Dr. Francis Walker, FTC chief economist, and Colonel William T. Chantland, FTC attorney. Paragraph by paragraph, the conferees studied Prichard's report, allegedly disclosing:

1—A vigorous crusade by the Post up to October 27, 1927, for defeat by referendum of an ordinance fixing rates at which the Public Service Co., of Colorado was to sell natural gas piped to Denver and sold to it by the Standard subsidiary.

SPREAD OF STRIKE

2—Spread, during the same month, of a Colorado coal strike, which threatened, under leadership of the I. W. W., to deprive Denver homes and public institutions of fuel.

3—Alleged delivery of the $350,000 to Bonfils October 27 by a special messenger on a voucher issued by Standard of New Jersey to officials of the subsidiary.

4—Publication by the Post on that day of an editorial demanding that the fight against natural gas be dropped and the petition for a referendum on the ordinance be withdrawn, so "we won't have to worry about a coal strike every spring and fall."

The Post was not represented at yesterday's conference. FTC officials expect the newspaper to have counsel at the public hearing. Higher executives of Standard Oil may also be summoned.

Editor Will Deny Knowledge of Deal

Denver, Col., Oct. 22—William C. Shepherd, publisher and editor of the Denver Post, will deny any knowledge of the payment of a large sum of money to his predecessor, the late Frederick G. Bonfils, by Standard Oil interests in October, 1927, to change his editorial policy toward the natural gas franchise, as set forth in a report of The Federal Trade Commission.

Whether he will attend the hearing in Washington next week, was not determined today.

Shepherd issued the following statement yesterday:

"Last Friday, October 18, we were notified by the Federal Trade Commission that there would be a hearing on October 29 in a case involving the Interstate Gas Company which contained, also, certain charges against F. G. Bonfils.

"These charges were based upon what J. B. Lurz of the Standard Oil of New Jersey, who is now dead, was supposed to have said to Mr. Lerge of the Interstate Gas Company about F. G. Bonfils, who is now dead. As the man who made the charges is dead and the man about whom they were made is dead, it is pretty safe to write anything in a report."

JIMMY WALKER BANS POLITICS

Copyright, 1935, by International News Service

Paris, Oct. 22—When former Mayor James J. Walker of New York returns to the United States he will keep away from politics, he told International News Service today.

Returning to Paris from an automobile tour around the French countryside, he said in an exclusive interview:

"I have worked hard to get back to health, and I don't want to lose it by going back into politics, because the way I do politics it is too strenuous."

Walker added he was not sure he would sail for the United States aboard the liner Manhattan tomorrow.

CLOTHES AWAIT Some Fair Lady

Quincy police have promised to muzzle their curiosity so that the young woman, who apparently lost a complete outfit of clothing, including outer garments as well as unmentionables, can claim them.

Police found the clothing off Rice road in Wollaston and, because of their good condition, believe they were not thrown away.

GLITTERING GIRL

By May Christie

CHAPTER XIX

Mrs. Sarrail rose. The unpleasant look was still on her face as she said, definitely: "I'm giving you fair warning. Continue this sort of thing—aid and abet your cousin Nan in meeting my husband—meet him alone in hide-away corners like this—and I shall set everybody of importance in this town against you. This is no idle threat. I can—and shall—make things extremely hard for you, Miss Tyson."

And with that, she disappeared. With burning cheeks, Vernon saw amused glances turned in her direction.

Oh, it had been hateful of Nan to bring her into this! Hateful of Nan to sneak off and join "Foggy" Henson! Hateful of Sugar to clear out cowardly as he had done, leaving her—an innocent intruder—to face the jealous anger of his wife!

She would not wait. She would go at once. She told the waiter to tell the gentleman on his return that she had been called home.

Hot tears in her eyes, and biting her lip to maintain composure, Vernon hurried down the stairs of the Goldfish Tavern and was just at the door leading into the street when someone touched her on the arm.

She swung round nervously. Was it the infuriated Myrtle? Apologetic Sugar? Reckless Nan?

"I must speak to you. Don't dash off like this, please."

She murmured something about being in a terrible hurry, and having an important appointment.

"My car's at the door. Let me run you to wherever you're going," said Terry.

He was masterful, like that. Upset as she was by the row with Sugar's wife, she couldn't stand here arguing . . .

In a few moments she was in his car, with Terry at the wheel, and the crisp October air blowing in their faces.

"To the Splendide, please," Vernon said nervously.

Terry Apologizes

Immediately Terry said: "I've an apology to make about not turning up for lunch with you today when I promised Nan I'd come."

"That's quite all right, Nan explained you had a previous engagement." She was staring straight ahead, and Terry thought how lovely she was looking, in the little green hat touched with coral, her bright russet hair peeping out over each ear.

"I was round at the Sarrails' house, I'd an appointment with Mr. Fairbanks—Sugar's father-in-law—about some business. When Nan telephoned me this morning, I forgot I'd agreed to stay on for lunch afterwards."

"I see. Your old friend Alma? That was it?"

Terry swerved to avoid a parked taxicab. Was it Vernon's fancy, or did he look confused?

"I brought them over to the Goldfish Tavern, hoping to see you—to explain—"

"There wasn't any need. I perfectly understand!" She added, with a sudden flash of anger: "Was it your bright idea to send Mrs. Sarrail upstairs after me and her husband?"

Terry swung round, startled. "Good heavens! Sugar was with you?"

"Yes. Nan had invited him."

"But I saw Nan downstairs in the bar, with that chap, 'Foggy' Henson. What was the big idea, leaving you alone?"

"Good Lord! And Myrtle Sarrail found you! She has got the devil of a temper when she's roused. Added to that, I take it she's slightly fed up with the nonchalant ways of her 'Sugar.'"

"Myrtle insulted me," said Vernon, her lips tightening. "She told me she'd make lots of trouble for me if it wasn't strictly hands-off."

Terry gave a long low whistle. "But it wasn't your fault. Didn't you tell her Nan had arranged the luncheon?"

"No. I didn't want to give Nan away. That would only have made bad considerably worse."

He thought: "She's a sport, sticking up for that harum-scarum little cousin of hers." Aloud he said, ruminatively: "It's perfectly true that Myrtle has quite a bit of influence in this town. Her family's very well known. If you get on the wrong side of her, she might harm you—officially."

Vernon flushed angrily. "What do I care? I haven't done anything wrong. I don't care if I never see any of those people again. I loathe the very word Society!"

His dark blue eyes widened. "But I thought you and your mother were crazy about society things. I thought you came to New York to meet people—the 'right kind of people'—your mother told me so herself. I was up in your apartment only the other day, hoping to take you out to dinner, and she told me you were heavily booked with Prince Karinoff."

"You're laughing at us. You're hateful. I wish we'd never met you." Tears of mortification were near the surface now.

"My dear little girl, that's the last thing I'd want to do. I was only tipping you off for your own good. I know Myrtle Sarrail and the set she travels with."

"Well, I hope I never see any of them again!"

Terry said shortly: "That doesn't include me, does it? If I really thought so, I wouldn't bother you, no matter how I felt."

She seized on these last words like a drowning person. "No matter how I felt . . ." Did he, then, really care for her?

She said, a little wildly: "No. No. I don't mean you, Terry—"

"Then you'll dine with me tonight? I have two tickets for the opening of 'Mad Marriage,' that new show at the Lyric. Afterwards we'll go on somewhere—anywhere you like—"

Oh, grab this chance! Don't let it slip away! Vernon said quickly, as the car pulled up outside the Hotel Splendide: "That would be lovely, Terry. "I'll meet you at seven o'clock tonight by the cigar stand in the lobby."

She remembered afterwards—and dismissed the thought at once—that that was where Sugar Sarrail had said he would wait for her!

Clash With Mother

She didn't care that Terry had returned to the Goldfish Tavern to lunch with hateful Myrtle Sarrail and her sister, Alma Fairbanks. Nothing mattered, in view of tonight's wonderful appointment! . . . .

• • • •

"Margie Tyson, I co declare I could spank you! Don't you know that Prince Karinoff is to dine with us tonight and then we're going to see that Russian film with him, and then we're taking him somewhere to supper after?"

"I don't care, Mother. Tell the Prince I'm sick. Tell him anything you can think of. Be as clever in putting him off as you were in putting Terry Shannon off, those times he telephoned me, and again when he came to call on me in this apartment."

"So Nan's been telling you? There's ingratitude for you. I did it for your own best interest, Maggie."

"I don't care what you did. It's all right now. I've seen him and it's been explained. I tell you I'm dining tonight with Mr. Shannon and we're going to the theater together, and then we're going on some place and dance."

"Hoighty-toighty! After all I've done for you for twenty years, that's a nice way to speak to your mother!"

"I'm sorry. But I've got to have some life of my own. I'm not a baby any longer. I've got to pick the people I like for my friends."

"So long as you keep 'em' as friends—and don't make the Prince jealous, so that he sheers off—"

Health

Exercising in Open Air Is Wisest

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

EXERCISE SERVES not only to maintain physical fitness, but also it helps to overcome many conditions of ill health.

It should not be practiced in the summer months only.

A certain amount of daily exercise should be obtained all year round. Certainly this must be the rule if good health is to be maintained.

Unfortunately, many who live in large cities like New York and Chicago lead sedentary lives most of the time and especially in the winter. The thought of systematic exercise never occurs to them; they are "too tired" or the weather is "too cold" to venture outdoors.

Physical activity of some kind must be engaged in during the cool weather if the body is to function properly. Exercise in the cold air is exhilarating. During the fall and winter months walking, hiking, horseback riding, football, ice skating, skiing, sledding and other outdoor games afford healthful exercise and likewise pleasant recreation.

For the tennis enthusiast, swimmer, handball player and even golfer, there are indoor facilities for continuing these activities during the cold weather. But it is very important that we get some kind of regular exercise in the open air.

Walking is the cheapest and yet in many respects the very finest form of exercise. When done in proper fashion it is of greatest value. Hold the body erect with chest thrown out. Take long, deep breaths so as to fill the lungs with good fresh air. This will help to purify the blood.

Bear in mind that deep breathing of fresh air is an exercise in itself. It does wonders to the chest muscles. It is a good idea to take setting-up exercises before an open window. This procedure has become exceedingly popular during the last few years. It is a practice beneficial to health.

Everyone needs exercise. But the type and amount must be governed by the health of the individual, his age, the nature of work he does, etc. Always the chosen exercise should be a pleasure, not a burden. To engage in exercise in the open air, let me repeat, is the best way to get it.

Exercise, no matter what form it takes, should never be carried to the point of undue fatigue. Harm may be done by too strenuous activity. That is why there should be proper supervision of athletics. No one should indulge regularly in any severe form of exercise without first having a complete physical examination.

The condition of the lungs and heart should be carefully checked. I am glad to say that these tests are now a part of the routine in all schools and colleges.

Never subject your unprepared muscles to violent exercises. It is wise to begin moderately and then to follow the program regularly. Persons who have passed the age of 30 or 40 should be careful not to overstrain by taking unaccustomed and strenuous exercises. Take it easy in the beginning.

Flower-Sprinkled Set

By ANNICE BRINK

ROWS of tiny scallops, that give an impression of being fragile as a cloud, go around and around to make this fluffy collar and cuff set. Crocheted roses are appliqued on it, and if done in brilliant tones will be particularly zestful. Sheer wools of simple cut will welcome such a set. For crocheting directions, simply write to Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, Boston Evening American, and incl ose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

MRS. CULBERTSON ON BRIDGE

Hair-Trigger Doubles

Do not hesitate to double your opponents merely because their contract is very low.

When they bid one or two of a suit, they must win seven or eight tricks to make their contract.

Many players overcall an opponent's opening bid with nothing but two or three honor-tricks and a four-card or weak five-card suit; and, if doubled, they find that they can take their honor-tricks and one or two small trumps, which will give them only four or five tricks and leave them open to a set of 300, 500 or even more points.

In doubling a low contract there are certain cautions which you must be careful to observe. First, you should be sure that you have at least J x x x or Q x x, preferably slightly more, in the opponents' suit; second, you must have about two honor-tricks; and, finally, you should not double if you hold as many as four cards in the suit your partner has bid.

A player who is quick on the trigger in doubling, without observing the general principles I have just stated, came to grief when he doubled Walter Malowan at two diamonds in the deal below:

East, dealer.

	♠ A 10 7 ♡ Q 8 4 2 ◇ 9 8 5 ♣ Q 10 7
♠ 9 ♡ K J 10 7 ◇ Q 10 4 3 ♣ 9 6 4 3	North West East South	♠ K Q J 8 ♡ 9 5 3 ◇ 7 ♣ A K J 5 2
	♠ 6 5 4 3 2 ♡ A 6 ◇ A K J 6 2 ♣ 8

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♣	Double	1 ♡	Pass
Pass	2 ◇	Double	Pass
Pass	Pass

Mr. Malowan, who was South, overbid his hand somewhat when he first made a takeout double and then bid his diamonds. He was lucky to find North with two valuable cards.

He was also a good enough player to play the hand beautifully, and he was rewarded by making his doubled contract when West misplayed the defense.

West's opening lead was a small club, on which dummy's ten was played. East won with the Jack.

He should now have shifted to the King of spades, to force out dummy's only entry, but instead he continued with the King of clubs, making Mr. Malowan's fine play possible.

South trumped the club, cashed the diamond King, then led the Ace and a low heart. West put up the heart King and led a spade, which was won by dummy's Ace.

The Queen of hearts was next led. South discarding a spade, and then the Queen of clubs was led and ruffed. South then tossed out one of his losing spades.

At this point South had only two diamonds, the Ace and Jack, and West had three. East took the Jack and Queen of spades, West discarding a heart and a club.

Then East led the King of spades, and West, having nothing but trumps, had to ruff with the diamond ten and lead another diamond into South Ace-Jack combination.

South made all five of his diamonds, two hearts and a spade. His score of two diamonds doubled was better than any other result he could have hoped for with his hand.

HUGH SPEAKS OF "APOLOGY" TO DICKY

CHAPTER 478

AS I LISTENED to Lillian's mocking tirade to Dicky concerning the possible reasons for Hugh's request to see both of us, I found my knees shaking so that I could scarcely follow her out of my study door, through which she was passing.

But I need not have feared. These two, Dicky and Lillian, understood each other thoroughly, and enjoy to the utmost the feud of wits which they often stage. With two mighty strides Dicky passed me, picked Lillian up bodily from the floor, hoisted her to his shoulder as he would a sack of flour, and went on down the hall to the library door, while I followed, helpless with laughter at her kicking feet and whirling hands, which she was finding impotent to inflict any damage upon Dicky.

POSSESSIVE HUSBAND

"Now, milady," he said as he reached the door, "What's the answer?" Are you going to pass your word to behave—or am I going to carry you in this way and drop you—like a trussed goat—at the foot of Hugh's couch?"

"King's X, of course," Lillian said, with a rueful grin, "for the duration of the interview. But say your prayers, my laddie buck, in preparation for the next time I catch you unawares."

"Who's afraid of the clawy cat?" Dicky hummed in atrocious parody as he set her down, and there, her face wiped clean of either mirth or annoyance, Lillian preceded us into the improvised sick room.

Hugh lay upon a hospital bed at the further end of the library, and his eyes were turned toward the door as if watching for us. I do not know whether Dicky's action was prompted by his natural courtesy, or by a childish desire to flaunt his role of husband before Hugh, but he slipped his hand under my elbow as we followed Lillian across the room. And then it was there with what I thought nervously, was ostentatious possessiveness when we halted by the sick bed.

A DRAMATIC MOMENT

Hugh's slightly knitted brows and an elusive expression of wondering pain in his eyes were the only indications that he had noted the action. I knew very well—and hoped that Dicky would also thus interpret these signs—that they could easily have their roots in many other things than Hugh's affectionate, possessive care of me.

"Well, old man! How goes it?"

Dicky released my arm as he spoke, and bent over the sick man with every appearance of solicitude.

"Don't speak unless it's absolutely necessary," he said. "Lil says that you want to talk to Madge and me, but let us help you all we can by taking the burden of the conversation. Just ask us the briefest of questions, and we'll try to make our answers as full as possible."

THE CONFESSION

"It isn't as simple as all that," he said. "There—is something—I must—say—to—both of—you."

"Drink this first," she said, "then lie back for two or three minutes before you speak again. Then I'll let you spiel to your heart's content."

He obeyed her, and we waited while a semblance of color crept into his sallow cheeks and pallid lips, and his eyes seemed to come alive. Then he spoke with stronger voice and less halting manner.

"I owe you an apology and a confession," he began. "I also owe you atonement. I want you to believe that I am ready to make it."

I did not know that my hand was groping blindly behind me until I felt Lillian's firm clasp upon it. My knees were fairly shaking beneath me. What was this fantastic rigmarole of "atonement" and "confession"? Had Hugh suddenly gone mad? And what would Dicky think?

Juliet Cap Revived

THERE ARE Juliet caps of silver and gold mesh combined with braid, which make almost any wearer look alluring. These are little round skull-cap affairs, which are worn on the back of your head, giving it appealing, babyish look to your curls.

The snood is another headdress revival, made of silk cord or chenille in bright colors to mach your evening gown, and worn well back on the head. It has an open fish-net mesh, through which your hair shines.

The wheat wreath, in gold, is one of the pets of the season, waving fronds of metallic wheat adding importance to your coiffure.

The jewelled "harme headband" also is new, being worn across the forehead, with a band of gold or silver fringe almost reaching your eyebrows.

NEW APRON DESIGN

Look Smart in the Kitchen

By MARIAN MARTIN

PATTERN 9626

There's more than one way to economize on kitchen expenses, and Marian Martin shows you a very easy one. Here's a brand new apron design you can make up in two slightly varying styles.

As you see, it's a good, substantial cover-up apron, with plenty of feminine appeal in the halter neck that does away with bothersome shoulder-straps. The two sides button smartly at center back with a neat over-lap.

Armed with sheers and some gay gingham, or percale you'll soon find how easy they are to make, too. And wouldn't they make a nice gift later for that practical friend? Complete, diagramed Marian Martin Sew Chart included.

Pattern 9626 may be ordered only in sizes small, medium and large. Small size apron A requires 2 yards 36 inch fabric; 1¾ yards for apron B.

Send fifteen cents in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for each Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, the style number and size of each pattern.

Be sure to send for your new Marian Martin Pattern Book! It pictures dozens of easy, thrifty ways to make up lovely new fabrics—in smart fall and winter clothes for your whole family!

Send for your copy now! Price of book, fifteen cents. Book and pattern together, twenty-five cents.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

He Spends Heavily, But Never On Her

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Archie is an only child and very much spoiled. He finished high school, but didn't make the grade in college because studying bored him, and he left at the end of his second year.

He has no job, lives at home and his parents supply him plentifully with pocket money.

He's always telling me about the shows he goes to, and how he takes the boys and treats them to supper afterwards. He always has money for cigarettes, candy and to buy gasoline for the family car, but he never does anything for me.

I'm no gold-digger, but I like a fellow to realize that I am alive and above ground. I used to be very much in love with Archie, but I find him irritating. If I go out with any other boy he gets furiously jealous. My parents are old-fashioned and want me to go with one boy only. SIMPLE SUSAN.

You gave yourself that name, my dear girl, and I think if you continue your friendship with Archie, you must realize it's not altogether a misfit.

Why should this thoroughly selfish young man be jealous when you go out with boys who realize that a girl expects an occasional outing? And if a boy has money, he's supposed to treat sometimes. It seems to me the sensible thing would be to declare a moratorium on Archie, till he learns what is to be expected of a "couring gentleman," as old mammies say in the South.

HIS "DAD" SUPPOSED TO HAVE MONEY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Dad has a wholesale grocery business and is supposed to be living in wealth. This has not spoiled my popularity with girls, although "the rumor is greatly exaggerated." As the late university I fell in love with a co-ed. We became engaged. She shared the delusion about Dad's money.

When I wanted to be married, my father offered me $1000 for emergencies, for which I was to give him a note and pay at interest-bearing periods, as any stranger would do. My salary in the business is $30.00 a week.

When I explained these things to my girl, she turned me down flat. She thought she should have the same kind of car mother has, though mother helped dad to make his money. And she felt she should live on the same scale as my parents.

Dad was disgusted and said, "No gold-diggers in the family." I'm very much broken up, want to ship on a sailing vessel and take a long voyage. Dad says I'm a fool. Do you think so?

STEPHEN W.

If you were my son, I'd be glad to let you take the sea voyage. A broken engagement and loss of faith in a girl are pretty serious things, and one doesn't recover from these twin blows immediately. You're likely to meet the girl at every turn, and that will make forgetting her doubly hard.

Beauty Answers

Question—My problem is one of scanty eyebrows—not lashes. I am a natural blonde and while my lashes are long and thick, my brows are very thin. In fact, I hardly have any at all. I used to tweeze them once upon a time, and I am wondering if this process actually killed the roots. What can I do to have thick brows again? B. E., Allston.

Answer—Yes, plucking is very apt to injure the papilla which makes a new hair when the old one is pulled out. First of all, you must exercise the eyebrows so that the blood streams will stimulate the arches. This can be done by lifting and lowering the eyebrows. It strengthens the tiny muscles at the hair roots. But don't do it if there's the slightest sign of a line streaking across the forehead.

Question: Will you please give your opinion regarding a milk diet? I have been told that a milk diet is one of the best methods for reducing and elimination. Is this true? And is it an easy diet to follow? I am overweight and my skin has lost the freshness of youth. I feel that I need a reliable diet of some kind.

Mrs. Ella M., West End.

Answer: You are indeed right. The real reason for dieting is to improve the appearance, whether it is reducing or cleansing the system. Milk being such a perfect food, the milk diet is one of the so-called restricted diets. This diet is also a good method of elimination, and we all know that faulty elimination is a common cause of disease. If you would care for this diet, please send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Beauty Editor, Boston Evening American.

Entertain at Cooking School

Cross and Dunn, radio funsters and vocalists, now featured in the Metropolitan Theatre's stage show, kept everyone happy at the Hotel Bradford today as hundreds of girls and women waited for the opening session of the ninth annual Boston Evening American—Sunday Advertiser Free Cooking school. Dunn, a former employe of the Boston American, got his stage start in an amateur show sponsored by this paper.

Glenwood Gas Range Shown

Those who attend the American Advertiser Free Cooking School will have a splendid opportunity to see the new Glenwood "Triumph" gas range which will be one of its very first public showings. It's as new as that!

The Glenwood Range Company's original intention was not to have this new model ready to show anywhere until next year, when it will be the leader of their new line of 1936 ranges. Ordinarily the new Glenwood models are announced at about the same time as most of the new automobiles. This year, however, the gas companies of Greater Boston played an active part in helping to design this range, the "Triumph" model and, by placing a large order for immediate delivery, enabled the Glenwood Company to produce it for both demonstration and sale this Fall instead of January.

So when you come to the Cooking School it will be like having the curtain raised in advance of the regular showing in order to let you see what the 1936 Glenwoods will look like.

Martha Lee's Recipes

Apple Pie Is King Now

By MARTHA LEE

Apple pie may be everyone's choice for favorite dessert number one, but there are many variations on the apple theme that are delicious.

Enough in fact to have a new recipe for each day of the week. So try some of these and serve apples as frequently as possible while they are so good.

WASHINGTON APPLE PIE

1 cup sugar
1 cup unsweetened pineapple juice (canned)
6 medium sized tart apples
1 teaspoon cornstarch
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon vanilla
1 tablespoon butter

Put the sugar and pineapple juice on to boil. When the mixture boils add the apples, which have been pared, cored and cut in fourths. Cook slowly, uncovered, until the fruit is tender, moving the apples barely enough to keep them covered with the syrup. In this way the fruit is kept whole. Lift the apples out carefully with a spoon and lay them in a pie pan lined with unbaked pastry. Dissolve the cornstarch in a little cold water (about 2 teaspoons) and add to the syrup.

Cook several minutes (about 5) or until the syrup thickens. Add the vanilla and butter and pour over the apples in the pastry-lined pan. Cut strips of pastry, ½ inch wide, brush lightly with cream or beaten egg mixed with water. Place criss-cross over the pie. Bake in a hot oven (450 deg. F.) 10 minutes and then reduce the heat to finish the baking (350 deg. F.) about 35 minutes.

COUNTRY APPLES

4 large green apples
¾ cup sugar
2 tablespoons butter
1-3 cup evaporated milk or cream

Wash, core and slice apples in ½ inch slices. Arrange in baking dish, dot with butter, mix sugar and milk or cream together and pour over apples. Bake in moderate oven, 350 deg. F., until apples are tender.

BLUSHING SALAD

8 apples
1½ cups sugar
1½ cups water
⅔ cup red cinnamon candies
1 package cream cheese
2 tablespoons finely chopped walnuts
Lettuce

Wash, pare and core apples. With a French vegetable cutter, cut small balls from 2 apples. Boil sugar, water and cinnamon candies 5 minutes. Put whole apples, 2 at a time, in the red syrup; cook slowly, turning frequently. When tender (but not soft) and evenly colored, remove from syrup; drain and cool. Cook balls in the syrup until tender; drain and cool. Mash cream cheese, soften with cream; add nuts. Fill cavities of apples with cream. Arrange lettuce on salad plates; put apple on each. Garnish with apple balls.

BAKED CRANBERRY APPLES

4 medium-sized tart apples
½ cup cranberries
¾ cup granulated sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon
1 tablespoon butter
½ cup boiling water

Wipe apples, remove the skin from the top of each apple about one-third of the way down. Place close together in a saucepan. Combine cranberries, sugar and cinnamon and fill apple centers with this mixture. What is left over is placed around the apples. Dot apples with butter. Cover closely and steam over low flame until tender about 30 to 50 minutes. Remove cover, sprinkle with a little more sugar and cook in broiling oven or hot oven until sugar is dissolved, basting liquid in which they were steamed. The makes four portions. Cranberries may be omitted if desired.

APPLE CHUTNEY

2 quarts apples
1 quart brown sugar
2 quarts cider vinegar
2 pounds seeded raisins
1 small onion

Wash, peel and core the apples. Cook them with the brown sugar and vinegar until they are smooth. When the mixture is thick place it in a crock and add the raisins, chopped fine, the onion, an ounce each of white and black mustard seed, two ounces of ground ginger, one tablespoon of salt and two or three red peppers, chopped fine. Mix the ingredients thoroughly, heat them and let them stand over night. In morning place the chutney in jars and seal them.

Women Flock to Cooking School

MEN SHOW INTEREST

Most of the men were of the husky hearty-eater type, all eagerly gazing at the platform where a luncheon table, set for four awaited Miss Ferguson's wizardry.

For the initial demonstration luncheon to be whipped up, transferred from stove to table and served to a lucky quartet selected from the audience, the "Parker House Cutlet" was the piece de resistance.

Two cups mixed cooked meat, one cup milk, four tablespoons flour, one egg, salt and pepper; one sambo chopped parsley; mix with crumbs in deep fat and thicken a white sauce, adding meat, fat and flour; mix in green peppers and spread on a platter —then shape into cutlets.

HELPFUL TO ALL

One thing is certain, experienced housewives and brides preparing the first meals in a new home will alike find the cooking school sessions helpful in every phase of homemaking.

Miss Ferguson at the first day session discussed many of the phases of cookery from the planning and preparation of economical meals to party and special occasion menus.

In addition, 25 holders of lucky tickets were awarded baskets of choice foods. There were also other valuable prizes awarded.

Miss Ferguson discussed dietetics, which play such an important role in the life of a housewife as well as the health of adults and children. Helpful hints on making home management more efficient and easier were pointed out by the famous culinary expert.

ECONOMICAL MENUS

In addressing the gathering at the opening Miss Ferguson in part said

"My instructions will include meals and recipes which are practical, economical, nutritious and easily prepared. The menus will be designed for women who can afford neither time nor money for more elaborate and expensive cookery.

Each day the doors of the ballroom will open at 12.30 p. m. with entertainment provided until the sessions open at 2 p. m. Additional entertainment will be given during intermission by stage of stage and radio.

Twenty-five baskets of choice foods will be awarded daily to lucky ticket holders.

Manufacturers and local stores are co-operating to make these classes the most interesting and successful in the history of the school.

The list of prizes to be awarded this year is the largest and most varied ever offered, including Electrolux gas refrigerator from Boston Consolidated Gas Co.; Easy Electric Washer from Edison Electric Illuminating Co. and Easy Washer Co.; 5-piece maple dinette set from Frank Ferdinand, Inc.; Glenwood gas range from Glenwood Range Co. and Boston Consolidated Gas Co.; Florence range oil burner from Florence Stove Co.

Also a Norge electric refrigerator from General Equipment Corp.; Royal vacuum cleaner from Edison Electric Illuminating Co., and Royal Vacuum Cleaner Co., coat of imported fur from Scott Furriers; three pairs of overdrapes from Thresher Bros.; a Kenmore vacuum cleaner from Sears Roebuck & Co.; a pair of Vitality shoes each day from Sterling's.

Also a "Miss America" Bulova watch from Washington Jewelry Co.; a 9x12 linoleum rug from Kane Furniture Co.; a pair of Coward shoes each day from Coward Shoe Co.; a student's suit from Richman Bros.; an I. E. S. student lamp each day from Edison Electric Illuminating Co.; a flacon of Terri perfume from Cyrol Perfumers; a box of Ivy Salada tea balls each day from Salada Tea Co.; 10 boxes of 24 bars each of Viva sandy soap from Lever P. Lewis & Sons, Inc.; a box of White House cookies each day from Loose Wiles Co.; a year's supply of Rinso from Lever Bros.

Vincent Youmans Weds "Follies" Girl

By International News Service

New York, Oct. 22 — Broadway heard today that Vincent Youmans, one of the more distinguished tin pan alley composers, had married a former "Follies" beauty, Mildred Boots.

They were wed in Colorado Springs, where she has been convalescing from a recent illness. He was divorced from his first wife, the former Anne Varley, a dancer, in 1933.

Rinso Eases Washing Day

What woman wouldn't welcome 52 free afternoons a year? What housewife wouldn't be thrilled at the thought of having 52 extra vacation afternoons for herself? The question is hardly worth asking. Any woman would welcome the wonderful vacation from household tasks.

That explains why so many women are attending the American Advertiser Free Cooking School at Hotel Bradford. Here Miss Edna Ferguson, well known home economics expert, is demonstrating how to end the hard work of wash day, and get clothes whiter and brighter than ever, without scrubbing or boiling. At these demonstrations women who once spent hours every Monday scrubbing and boiling the week's wash are discovering that Rinso, the wonderful work-saving laundry soap, does away with all the backbreaking labor of washday—and actually soaks clothes four or five shades whiter without scrubbing or boiling.

Women who attend these money-making demonstrations given by Miss Ferguson are made to realize that clothes soaked whiter in safe Rinso suds are bound to last two or three times longer, because they are not scrubbed threadbare. This naturally means a saving of a considerable amount of money for the average housewife. As for dishwashing and all other household cleaning, Rinso loosens dirt and grease so thoroughly that these household tasks take much less time and effort. Not only does Miss Ferguson recommend Rinso, but the makers of 34 famous washing machines gladly endorse this marvelous soap. It has been tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Institute and is also endorsed by 338 home economists of leading newspapers.

Luxuries for the Bath

By Arline Gould

It's the pleasant useless little things that we need these days when most of us are busy being very social and have little time to think of our state of health or well-being.

If you can imagine any better nicety than a bath's soft luxury, cleansing and purifying your tired body with fragrance and warmth, then you will have to name it.

Personally we can think of no more exquisite sensation than plunging into a fragrant bath that smells like an old-fashioned garden when the sun goes down. Fatigue vanishes in the bath, blood streams get about their business, and roses creep back into the cheeks.

If you are trying to see how far you can make the dollar go, try making your own bath preparations. Toilet waters, bath oils, perfumed bath bags—all hold a wealth of fascination for those to whom a refreshing plunge is still the best guarantee of beauty.

Oatmeal bags are such delightful bath accessories that it's a pity they are not more generally used. Particularly for arms and legs that go goose-fleshy every once in a while.

Not only do these bath bags remove the harshness of plain water, but they give your skin that [illegible] touch you love. And to satisfy your beauty's vanity, a few drops of a fragrant bath oil in the water will lift it [illegible] and make you feel [illegible] as your friends [illegible]

DRAWN BY GAIL PATRICK.

If you would like a recipe to make these oatmeal bags and how to make your own bath oil, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Arline Gould, Boston Evening American, Boston.

COKE CONTEST VICTORS FETED

The winners, Malden, fared very well in the beautifully appointed auditorium, which was decorated to resemble the prow of a vessel—the "3 B. New England Coke."

Willis Urban, manager of the Malden office, and his sales crew, sold more coke from May to October 11 than any other office of the company. Second prize was won by the Codman Square office, while third went to the Blue Hills office.

During the dinner, music and entertainment was furnished, and dancing followed.

'FIXER' INVESTIGATES POSTOFFICE NOISE

"THE TROUBLE FIXER"
Public Service Department, Boston Evening American.

This department has been installed as a public service for Boston Evening American readers. It will endeavor to solve problems and the troubles dealing with city, state or public utility service. Requests must be specific and brief. No anonymous requests, nor matters of a purely private nature can be considered.

Another reader waxes indignant about a post-office inconvenience today. R. C. B. of Beacon street, sends "The Trouble Fixer" the following for consideration.

"I will head this—Does the American Government Want to Disturb the Peace?

"You may be able to find out the answer in this question.

"At the Burlington street, Back Bay, branch of the post-office there is a power-belt on iron rollers which carries mail bags from the railroad cars up the outside of the building to the top floor. This action disturbs about one hundred families in the immediate neighborhood.

"This conveyer runs practically 24 hours per day and has been complained of by many people, but no attention has been paid to the complaints.

"I am quite sure no manufacturers in the locality would be allowed to create such a disturbance."

"The Trouble Fixer" will take a look into this matter to see if the complaint fits the facts.

TOREADOR SONG BY TIBBETT ON AIR

By N. F. T.

Two truly famous operatic arias are apparently considered better than one first time effort. Thus thinks Lawrence Tibbett, the tall soloing star of radio, concert stage and the films.

Tonight when the full throated Tibbett tones ring out on the 8:30 to 9 o'clock air (WNAC) with Don Voorhees orchestral accompaniment, his personally picked pieces are to be the "Toreador Song" from Bizet's well known "Carmen" and "To The Evening Star" from Wagner's traditional "Tannhauser" classic.

It happens that Tibbett planned originally to turn in a world radio premiers of a new "Drinking Song," by Maurice Ravel. Second thought, altered decision or whatever the reason, finds word flashing through just before putting his program highlight into print, that the pair of operatic arias should be presented instead. He has in mind to conclude with the piece that first figured to be just another popular ballad, but rather has come to be regarded as worthy of classic rating, the "Without a Song" composition of Vincent Youmans.

SECRET AGENT STAR

Talent displayed by little 13-year-old Margaret Shargaian, juvenile violinist of Somerville, provides the attraction personality for "Uncle News" during his Boston Evening American quarter hour (WAAB) with Joe Lally and Ruth Hasson this evening. Meaning when it's Secret Agent X-9 time again, as usual, at 6:45 p. m.

* * *

There's a striking new big band concert coming across (WBZ) for the first time tonight, due on the dials at 7:45 p. m. Music by 40 musicians, under Arthur T. Cougan direction. Moreover, and a unique angle involved, is that every one of the group are employes of the sponsor, the big cookstove building company of Gardner.

Cross and Dunn, the comedians now being considered for network duty by two important broadcasting backers, are entertaining the Martha Lee Cooking School ladies this week. They take time out from the Metropolitan Theater stage show to turn in their songs and stories during the Boston Evening American sessions at the Hotel Bradford.

THIS EAR—THAT AIR

Terry O'Toole gets going in his boy from Ireland role with a brand new series (WAAB), starting at 7:15 tonight, having accordion, violin and harp music to round out the offering . . . Waring and his "Pennsylvanians" outfit, with Stoopnagle and Budd, feed their feature from coast to coast out of Toronto this evening (WNAC) when it's 9:30 . . . Guy Lombardo and his "Royal Canadians" heading Hubward for a Boston week in person, beginning next Friday . . . Edwin C. Hill, commentator and columnist for your favorite evening daily here, steps into the guest star spotlight while Eddie Duchin holds forth (WEEI) between 9:30 and 10 o'clock tonight . . . Block and Sully visit with Ben Bernie this evening (WEEI) at 8 . . . Carl Moore, often erroneously called exuberant, enters his latest effort at the head of a musical group (WNAC) today in the 5 to 5:15 open spaces. Carl brings with him the whirlwind xylophonist, Salvi Cavicchio, and Bobby Morris, popular violinist of numerous network triumphs locally.

Look here, I said to Harry Jr.—folks are pretty much the same when it comes to liking good things. For instance, take us Wilkens that have been spending our whole lives making whiskey. Our own Family's Whiskey tastes grander to us than any other whiskey we ever took a taste of. Well then, it's more than likely it'll taste that much better to other folks, too! And taking it all in all, it appears to have turned out pretty much that way—considering how excited everybody's got over the tastiness of our Wilken Family Whiskey! Harry E. Wilken Sr.

PREVAILING WAGES ADOPTED

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

ROBERT E. ROGERS

Rev. Reinhold Niebuhr of the Union Theological School, speaking at the Community Church on Sunday, has come to the tentative conclusion that the theory of progress is not as valid as it might be. His particular preoccupation seemed to be the Italian claim that they were bringing civilization and progress to the Ethiopians. He took the standardized attitude that high explosives, tanks, and gases may be more efficient but that they do not necessarily mean "the good life" which is the ethical test of progress.

But as Chesterton long ago pointed out, the idea of progress does not necessarily have any moral implications. It merely implies movement, but not necessarily in the "right" direction. It has no implication of morals or tastes. Dr. Niebuhr, for instance, deplored the fact that the great progress of the radio has resulted chiefly in an increasing popularity of jazz.

This merely means, Chesterton would point out, that Dr. Niebuhr does not like jazz and does like some other kind of music. Progress is not a matter of taste, for tastes cannot be measured.

Matters of Morality Difficult to Measure

Nor can you measure the progress implied by a primitive free people's determination to defend its own liberty compared to a great modern power's determination to organize that people for economic exploitation. These are matters of social morality, largely subjective, and hardly amenable to measurement.

Progress, then, is a measurement of the degree in which society or civilization, as we like to call it, obeys the law of natural evolution.

The society of capitalistic individualism represents the furthest point in progress the modern world has yet reached.

Possibly it is a problem which cannot be expressed in terms of morality or happiness at all. If it is a law of nature, as it seems to be, then our idealists who believe that human morality can control nature are in the position of those who seek to dam with flimsy, man-made barriers the inexorable flow of a glacier.

Civilization May Be Worse Than Barbarism

It is perfectly possible that the Ethiopians are physically healthier and stronger, socially happier, religiously more sincere, and of greater moral integrity than the citizens of a great modern "civilized" state. It is not unlikely that a violent conversion by force to "civilization" will harm them as irretrievably as that same civilization has harmed the inhabitants of the South Seas.

The fact remains that the modern world is overwhelmingly "progressive" in its resistless drift toward coherent complexity. And since the law of the universe is that greater masses attract lesser masses, as the sun attracts the planets, the process by which the great masses of civilization have attracted the barbarous peoples out of their isolation into the orbit of progress is hardly one to be understood, much less judged, in terms of human morality. It may be that Nature has a morality of its own which we are yet far from understanding, but to which we must bow.

Course May Appear Fatalistic to Many

This of course will strike many sincere people as fatalistic and immoral. But even for those who worry about Ethiopia and who hope that the League of Nations will stop Mussolini in his tracks, there is a shred of comfort.

Just as Ethiopia, obeying the law of evolution is attracted into Italy's orbit and "civilized," so Italy itself may no longer remain on the lower evolutionary level of a nation but may evolve into one of the cells of the more highly complex organism we call an Association of Nations. It may be that the civilization we are moving inevitably toward is super-national and that H. G. Wells is its prophet.

At any rate our American habit of thinking of Mussolini as a big gangster, Haile Selassie as an innocent bystander, and the League as an organization of G men, is hardly an adequate way of treating the situation. Even in terms of idealistic morality it is not adequate.

Nature has its purposes, in comparison with which ours are petty and short-sighted. Napoleon believed that God is on the side of the heavier artillery. It may be so, indeed.

Fighting Somerville Blaze Which Endangered Three

Mark down a score to the credit of the Somerville fire department—making a nice "stop" here at 315 Middlesex avenue, East Somerville! The flames roaring through a three-story building threatened to spread to nearby garages but fast work by hosemen kept the blaze under control. Three persons had narrow escapes when the fire started, following alleged explosion of a heater.

Three Flee Blast In Somerville

Two men and a woman barely escaped today when flames, following an explosion of a heater in a second floor office, swept the three-story frame structure of Joseph Cotter, Inc., 315 Middlesex avenue, East Somerville.

The fire made such rapid headway, however, that the trio were barely able to get to the street to sound an alarm.

Deputy Chief Fred Pope and a detail of Somerville motorcycle patrolmen responded by the blaze watched the flames in their speedy ascent toward the sky.

The fire was under control in half an hour after nearby garages had been imperiled by the possibility of the fire spreading to a chain store warehouse directly across the street on Middlesex avenue. Damage was estimated at $10,000 by fire officials.

G. O. P. Women Hit Food Cost Boost

Resolutions protesting the increasing cost of foodstuffs, which is working dire hardship upon the people of the United States, were adopted today at a meeting of women members of the Republican Clubs of Massachusetts and women members of the Republican State Committee.

The meeting was held in the Women's Republican Club, 40 Beacon street. The gathering spoke for more than 20,000 women.

B. U. ELECTS Law Officials

Two of the four senior class officers elected at Boston University Law School will serve their third term, it was announced today.

The election results are as follows: David Hanlon, Jr., Hyde Park, president, Daniel Kesman, Ludlow, Vt., vice-president; Dorothy M. Golden, Cohasset, secretary; Ottillo D. Giustina, Springfield, treasurer; Allan M. Yoffa, Boston, council delegate. Miss Golden and Kesman have held these offices for two years previously.

PHOOEY, SAYS B. U.

Harvard 'Guide' Ridiculed

Harvard Man's Guide Book, the Harvard man himself and the gilt-edged deb whose parties he was advised, in the current issue, to grace, were accorded three rousing piffles and a sharp, decisive piff today by the Boston University News.

Phooey from me to you! Popped the News, undergraduate mouthpiece of the uptown seat of learning whose co-eds, beyond being asked to dissect dates, were ignored by the Guide.

The News said a lot of things and held a brief for the hurt feelings of the fair B. U'ers and put Harvard indifference to the test with the following.

SNIFFS TURN TO LAUGHS

"While we don't care to be funny at the expense of Harvard men (they're usually funny at their own expense) we reserve the right to comment about their alleged corner on the co-ed market.

"Ticking clocks have jocked the time since Harvardery, when mentioned, received a slight snicker at the University. Now they get a laugh.

"The depression has changed many things; now a Harvard boy connotes a picture of a juvenile brain prematurely put in possession of money. And money, being what it is these days, renders a possessor in the position of a bandit with a gun. One flatters the bandit. One doesn't like him."

So much or so little for the Harvard man.

As to the tiny group of debutantes whose parties the Guide declares he may attend without jeopardizing his reputation for good judgment, the News phooed:

"Lest the university co-eds feel slighted, we venture to console them with the thought that a debutante is usually either one of two things, or a combination of both.

"1—A very, very homely girl with much money who uses her purse to lure a very, very, handsome, social registered husband to the altar by posing as a humanitarian with her charity work, or as an 'artist' at a summer theater.

BEAUTY GETS WARNING

"2—A very, very beautiful girl who uses her looks to hook a very, very homely husband who has blue blood and a barrel of dough; she usually winds up with a divorce and the barrel of dough."

So much for the debutantes.

The Guide editors charged the News, published for profit. But the big, double-phooey windup centered this kick.

"Boiled down behind the battle line of the social war between dropping debs, heart-breaking Harvarders and piqued co-eds are these facts:

"The story on the debutante debunkles was written by a B. U. graduate who plays at housekeeping instead of peeking into the inviolate piffle of the blue-blooded misses."

So there!

Woonsocket Bridge Swept By Flames

Woonsocket, R. I., Oct. 22—Freight service to four mill communities was destroyed, along with $55,000 in mill property and a railroad bridge across the Blackstone river, in a spectacular fire here today.

The towns affected are Forestdale, Slatersville, Oakland and Glendale, on the Woonsocket-Pascoag branch of the New Haven railroad.

Forty thousand gallons of gasoline in two huge storage tanks was in the path of the fire and the city's entire fire-fighting force succeeded in checking the flames only a few hundred feet from the tanks.

One firemen was slightly injured and seven employes of a mill, operated by the Verhust Comb Company, were forced to flee.

Thirty minutes after the fire started under the bridge, the creosote soaked structure collapsed. Heat forced firemen to fight the flames from a distance.

Hurley Receives Pupils

More than 300 boys and girls, members of the Garden City Club of Worcester, were today addressed by Acting Governor Joseph L. Hurley in the State House.

Chelsea, Woburn Poll Big Vote

Indications that 70 per cent of Chelsea's 15,882 registered voters would vote before nightfall were seen in the lineup at noon when the polls opened. They piled up 9,000 by 4 p. m.

A total of 62 candidates is battling for 20 nominations for 15 places to be contested in the election November 12.

Edward J. Volpe and Representative William H. Molloy are pitted against opponents in the mayoralty race, but three women candidates for city council are also contesting fights.

Mrs. Mary V. Cox is making a determined fight for aldermanic and School Committeewoman Sophie M. Kerrigan is being given active opposition by Miss Julia Hoffman, attorney.

In Woburn Mayor Edward W. Keaney is opposed by former Mayor Thomas H. Duffy and by Mrs. Mary C. Curran Cullen, mother of eight children and member of the board of health and charities.

This fri-cornered fight is among the Democratic aspirants.

Potato Growers To Have Hearing

Frank H. Foy, state director for the National Emergency Council, today announced that potato growers would be given a hearing in Boston Nov. 4, to discuss the price-pegging provisions of the AAA.

The principal provision is a plan to extend cash payments to farmers to induce them to divert their surpluses toward alcohol, starch and other industrial uses, rather than break the market with overproduction.

Dies on Garrote

Granada, Spain, Oct. 22 (AP)—Manuel Vargas, the fifth man to be executed in Spain since re-establishment of the death penalty in 1933, died today by this country's unique method of execution—garroting. He was a convicted slayer.

Back Bay Fire Routs Women

Nearly a score of persons, including several women, were driven to the street early today in their night-clothing when fire broke out in a six room apartment in Commonwealth avenue, Back Bay.

Mrs. Harvey T. Spring, occupying an apartment on the first floor was awakened by the crackling of flames and smell of smoke in her suite.

She screamed a warning to the tenants.

Night Club Singer Gets Settlement

Settlement out of court, of night-club entertainer Sophie L. Josephs' civil suit against Harry M. Nellie, former M. I. T. student now residing in New York city, was announced in Dallas by Judge Abraham F. Prysock in District Superior Court.

Miss Josephs, who is 20 and resides in Brookline, was not disclosed. Neither she nor Nellie was in court today.

Edison Stock Plan Stirs Protest

Directors of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company are seeking a $16,000,000 stock issue approval to retire coupon notes due April 15, 1936, instead of a bond issue was questioned at a hearing today before the state public utilities commissioners.

The query was raised by Assistant Corporation Counsel Lewis E. Weinstein, who contended the cost of a stock issue, with federal tax and other items, would be $400,000 more than the bond issue.

F. Manley Ives, attorney for the Edison company, replied. The stockholders, not the directors favored the stock.

WPA Sets New Pay Scale

JOBS FOR 100,000

Effective November 1, new wage scales which will "place Massachusetts in the van of states paying the prevailing wage for skilled labor" will be announced by State WPA Administrator Arthur G. Rotch.

Administrator Rotch said today hours of work for unskilled labor will be reduced from 140 to 112 hours per month.

The announcement of working hours has been cleared through the Works Progress Administration at Washington to the various state administrators.

For professional grades of workers, wages will be adjusted, he said, to conform to current conditions in the communities where applied.

$20,589,643 Ready

Rotch already had announced that $20,589,643 in WPA grants had finally been made available to Massachusetts through the signature of Comptroller General J. R. McCarl.

He also revealed that about $42,000,000 of a proposed $48,000,000 Massachusetts WPA program had received administration approval.

THIS GIRL IS ABOUT TOWN

By Marjorie McBride

MARJORIE McBRIDE

Alvan T. Fuller, former governor, ran a bicycle shop in Malden . . . John P. Feeney, brilliant lawyer, worked in a tannery . . . Judge Frank J. Donahue was a crib reporter . . . William Kennedy, head of the Kennedy store in Summer street, was a bellboy in the Beaconsfield Hotel . . . E. Fred Cullen, president of the Johnson Educator Biscuit Company, was a street car conductor . . . Frank Dorr, of Raymond's, toiled in a sawmill.

Governor Curley was a 2-cents boy. He hadn't thought of becoming an orator. But he was pretty good on delivery in those days, too.

At the Hotel Statler's Salle Moderne, I saw Jack Marshard and Jack Denny, and partners, dancing to the rhythm of Joe Reichman's band. Both, of course, are orchestra leaders and wield wicked batons in their own right.

Radcliffe Busy Knitting As Wellesley Eats "Dogs"

At Radcliffe, I'm informed, all the girls are knitting their own sweaters, and actually wearing them. A return to Victorianism? I guess not. For at Wellesley, the current craze is dining out in hot dog stands. Isn't so quaint!

Mrs. Thomas Walker, president of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, leans to blacks, lightened with touches of turquoise or white.

Soon the admirals of the toy fleet that plies the Lagoon in the Charles River Basin will be putting their boats away for the season.

They are members of the Boston Model Yacht Club with headquarters in John Shepherd's old coach house in Exeter street. Each of the thirty members makes and sails his own boat.

Regattas are held twice a week, providing entertainment for thousands. But the crowd doesn't always understand what it's all about.

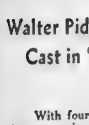
Walter Pidgeon Shares Honors; Capable Cast in 'There's Wisdom in Women'

By GEORGE HOLLAND

With four roles and three seasons the total of her stage experience, Ruth Weston came of starring age last night at the Colonial Theater in a comedy called "There's Wisdom in Women," by Joseph C. Kesselring, a new name among the playwrights.



George Holland

It is too bad that Miss Weston did not reach stardom a play or two ago, and it will be too bad if her name is not spelled in lights as it is not now, when her present vehicle arrives next Tuesday in New York.

Had Miss Weston been backed by a starring role in a solid success, her performance and that of Walter Pidgeon might readily do for the play, "There's Wisdom in Women," what the Jane Cowl-Rain pairing did for "Romeo and Juliet" and Leslie Howard managed to accomplish in the case of another flimsy theatre piece about fairly unreal humans, "Her Cardboard Lover." That play ran on and on

And as may "There's Wisdom in Women." It entertains. It gives you everything you ask of the spoken stage save the breath of life. And that, perhaps, is not important any more. Back to "The Woman in the Case," up to "No More Ladies," the story of "There's Wisdom in Women," in various variations, has been always commercial when mounted with taste as to product, cost invisibly and nurtured into benevolence by a consummate theatrical artisan like Harry Wagstaff Gribble

* * *

The tom-cat husband in the case is a composer-pianist named Leon Nirdoff, and it is in this part that Mr. Pidgeon takes a nice step forward in a good career. He makes of the fatuous virtuoso a credible creature. Miss Weston is the injured wife, Marcella. Margolo has first-act forebodings about the probable loss of her husband to another woman, if a vixen with "culture" should come along. She is aware that the composer has been whimsical with a number of cheaper rivals. Tony, her husband's manager and best friend (Glenn Anders), agrees that her fears have some foundation.

The gal with "culture" comes along, in the personable Betty Lawford, whose role is that of Cecilia Wandover. Margolo tricks Cecilia, who has become "crazy" quite quickly to the married husband, into finally saying "yes" with her lips as well as her eyes.

* * *

The situation is not strictly formula, and Mr Gribble is improving only on his "No More Ladies" for the mise en scene. Nevertheless has loosed ever so briefly from the spell of Miss Weston, the able histrionics of Messrs. Pidgeon and Anders, and Miss Lawford, it wears shiny and the barest bit shoddy more quickly than it should

Two extremely daring spells of love-making, a period of grand pianoforte by Mr. Pidgeon, flashes of Mr. Pidgeon in tan a Turkish towel and a cup of something around his neck, and (b) in short, a brief scene in which the audience hopes that Miss Weston is about to settle down with Tony as a "recidivism" in love; a magnificent setting by John Root, and some beautiful gowns, particularly those one, on Miss Weston, are a few of the expert effects in "There's Wisdom in Women."

In addition to expected good performances by Frances Madux, Mary Hone Morrison, Alfredo Hoss, Charles Henderson and Joseph Kalinzi, there comes a gem of comment from Jane Bancroft of Cohasset.

Final De Cou

Branson de Cou concludes his series of Dream Pictures at Tremont Temple Friday evening and Saturday afternoon with the presentation of "The Italian Lakes and Lombardy."

Through the ancient cities of Bologna and Pisa, with glimpses of Lmoine and the Riva, the traveler takes his audience to the beautiful Italian lake country.

Marion Davies Will Star In 'Twelfth Night'

By JERRY HOFFMAN

(Copyright 1935, by Universal Service)

Los Angeles, Oct. 22—Professor Max Reinhardt left for New York last night, thoroughly elated. Not only, in his brief Hollywood visit, did he witness the triumph of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," but he finally has succeeded in getting Marion Davies' consent to star in his next film production, "Twelfth Night."

For many months, "The Wizard of Salzburg" has been trying to persuade Marion to play Viola. In all Shakespeare, he feels, are few roles so ideally suited to the combination of Marion's delicious sense of comedy, her clever mimicry and her beauty.

Marion Davies

During his short stay, Reinhardt, Miss Davies, Jack Warner and Hal Wallis held a series of conferences and decided to start production on the Shakespearean comedy as soon as Marion completes her next picture.

This will give Reinhardt enough time in which to present his Biblical spectacle, "The Road to Promise," on the New York stage before returning to Hollywood.

It seemed a shame to split Buddy and Vilma Edsen after they made such a hit as a team in "Broadway Melody of 1936," and after working together in shows for so long M-G-Mevidently has plans of its own for Buddy, why by the way, is married to Winchell's girl Friday, Ruth Cambridge. He has been loaned to Darryl Zanuck for one of the principal parts in "Captain January" starring Shirley Temple. I suppose this means more dancing lessons for the tiny Temple whose last teacher was Bill Robinson.

With the closing of "Bright Star" Saturday in which Lee Tracy and Julie Haydon were appearing in New York, Paramount's troubles in casting "Lullaby" may be over. They have asked Miss Haydon to return to Hollywood immediately and make tests for the original by John Bright and Robert Tasker based on the famous cradle in Chicago.

Originally Barbara Stanwyck was to play the lead. She turned it down because adoptions hit too close to home. Sylvia Sidney, next scheduled, didn't sign a new contract with Paramount. Now they're hoping.

What a swell entrance Baby Leroy made to the Universal Studio just when everyone was about to congratulate him on being the youngest player ever borrowed by one producer from another, Baby swung a left hook right on Director John Stahl's schnozzola.

"K. O." Leroy was loaned by Paramount for "The Magnificent Obsession," starring Irene Dunne. Bewildered friends at Paramount could only explain Baby's actions with:

"He must have thought Stahl was his old sparring partner, W. C. Fields."

BROWN; FRANCES DRAKE and HENRY MOLLISON going places continually ever since they met in a Universal picture; BING CROSBY making a hilariously incongruous picture entirely in Chinese costume, riding a bicycle over the Paramount lot and smoking a big cigar; JESSICA BARTHELMESS flying to New York in response to the many wires from DICK imploring her to come; IRVING CUMMINGS, completely recovered, reporting for work at 20th Century-Fox; MARLENE DIETRICH closing her set to all the press—also the publicity department. New Cast In Shubert Musical

By HARRIS MORGAN

Relatively speaking a centenarian among musical revues, "Life Begins at 8:40," returned to the Shubert last evening.

There's a brand new cast, with the buoyant Milton Berle, with a clear conscience and an incredible zest, appropriating Bert Lahr's nonsense.

Lita Grey Chaplin, having little to do but look very lovely indeed, warbles a plaintive "Spring Fever," and asks "What Can You Say in A Love Song."

Ann Seymour, with the grandest sense of humor in captivity, and her expert flair for showmanship, makes the most of "My Paramount-Publix-Roxy Rose," and the lament of the lady who believed all the advertisements and still couldn't hold her man.

Best of all, young Buster West, who danced alone and with an extraordinarily lithe lady named Lucille Page, tied up the show in knots, and had to be summoned by Mr. Berle, hiding behind a newspaper and a monocle, into the hilarious "China Up" sketch to take a bow.

Your favorite sketches and tunes, a bit shopworn from usage and memory, are still there, with the Quartet Erotica, consisting of Rabelais, De Maupassant, Boccacio and Balzac, complaining bitterly of the Ulysses who made them sissies, still one of the most original of the lyric ideas of Mr Ira Gershwin

Then there's a rowdy affair, "She Loves Me," with Berle tricked out in an orange wig and sweat shirt, as a Princeton man with horticultural interests. This and his riotous radio announcing, ending up with a pineapple cream pie in his face, are the high spots of Mr. Berle's evening. Skip the comparisons. Milton's jokes may belong to somebody else, but his delivery is strictly Berle.

The Weidman dance groups, which first brought the once grotesque Wigman angularities to Broadway, have new and bright routines, and Walter Dare Wahl and Emmet Oldfield contribute some of the craziest acrobatics on the boards.

Jane Bancroft's Stage Debut Attracts Fashionables

By BETTY ALDEN

LAST EVENING JANE BANCROFT won another pair of hypothetical spurs . . . Of course she has had many pairs of real spurs since that none too distant day when her proud nurse dressed her in her first riding habit and boosted her upon the back of a pudgy, docile pony . . . But now we are speaking of those hypothetical spurs which are a gauge of knighthood and the mark of accomplishment . . .

CLAIRE MORAN

When as a sub-deb in her teens, Jane rode her horse to her first blue ribbon, she had won beyond question the spurs of horsemanship and last evening upon the stage at the Colonial Theater, she braved her baptism of fire . . . Before the eyes of a big city first night audience she came off with flying colors to prove that her amateur days are over and that she is now fully deserving of that coveted title, "professional" actress.

Mrs. Hugh Bancroft, her mother, was in the audience, with a group of friends whom she had entertained at dinner . . . Among them were Miss Frances Robinson Duff, who flew over from New York to indulge her pride in watching the performance of Jane, her former pupil in dramatics . . . Also with Mrs. Bancroft were her niece, Martha Endicott, reserved and dignified in a sapphire blue dinner gown, with the latter's father, and John Gannett, to whom she will be married next week. Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Bancroft, Jr., looked as proud as punch of Jane. The young Mrs. Bancroft's outfit was worthy of being strutted before the footlights, a smooth brown velvet dinner ensemble, with a hip length fitted jacket lavishly furred with red fox . . .

One member of the family was missing, however, for Mrs. William Cox, Jane's sister, is judging at an out of town horse show and cannot attend the play until her return on Wednesday . . . Mr. Cox and Mr. Guy Bancroft were there . . .

Also in the large audience and apparently sharing our enthusiasm for the play, were Mrs. Harold Jefferson Coolidge in black moire, Mrs. Horace Drinkwater with her daughter, Mrs. William Ball Rice and her brother, Davis C. Drinkwater . . . Mrs. J. Brooks Fenno, Jr., persistently dodging an alert photographer . . . Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller, swathed in soft white fur over a violet gown, accompanied by Lydia and Mary, both very chic in satins and furs . . .

The author and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kesselring, sat complacently in their front row seats . . . Anyone might have mistaken Mrs. Kesselring for a Spanish senorita with her ruffled black taffeta and scarlet rose in her black hair . . . Mr. and Mrs. Royden Loring were an attractive couple as were the John Bishops and the John Gardner Flints . . .

• • •

Mrs. A. O. Barker in Blue

MRS. A. O. BARKER was, as usual, well turned out in a French blue moire gown trimmed with a wide fuschia sash and a small cape edged with fuschia . . . Others noticed were Mrs. John Chapin, Miss Martha Chapin, Polly Cotter, Lavinia Sabine, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Revere, Mrs. Horace Morison in a black velvet gown, Rebekah Hobbs in scarlet tunic over a dark skirt, Louise Condit in sheer black lace, Mrs. John Bottomley, Alison Kimpton, Mrs. William Emerson Barrett, Mrs. William B. Pratt, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Walker, Claire Moran, Mrs. Delano Wight and Miss Margaret Fish . . .

• • •

Frances Cove has abandoned her original plan to make her debut at a large dance during the Christmas holidays and has postponed the date of her party to January 3 at the Copley-Plaza, to be sure that she and her little sister debs will have a full Harvard stag line to dance attendance upon them . . .

• • •

Mrs. Robert W. Lovett of Fairfield street entertained a group of fifteen young people last evening at a supper dance in the Sheraton room of the Copley-Plaza, in honor of her granddaughter, Miss Elizabeth Sturgis, a debutante of this season.

• • •

Winter Garden Club Planned

THE CORRIDORS of Phillips House are a new social center these days what with Mrs. William H. Brown and several other prominent socialites receiving their friends in their respective rooms . . . We glimpsed Mrs. Lewis Bell (Adelaide Brown) of Cohasset dashing in the other afternoon to cheer her mother up a bit and Jane Hamlin finds opportunity between rehearsals at the Junior League to shorten the days for her well-known father, B. Nason Hamlin, who is recovering from a fall from his polo pony several weeks ago . . .

Mr. Hamlin's daughter-in-law, Mrs. Francis Peabody Hamlin (Mary Waterbury), has gone out West to spend the winter instead of remaining under the Hamlin rooftop in Dedham . . .

• • •

One of the speakers we heard at a Garden Club gathering last winter suggested that all Garden Clubs should have the advantage of a sabbatical year, to give the members opportunity to gather fresh ideas and also have rest from the responsibilities of large flower shows and other activities associated with the clubs . . . But evidently this speaker's suggestions have been unheeded, for we hear news of all kinds of activities being planned by the various local clubs . . .

The latest wrinkle in society's horticultural circles are plans for a winter garden club, to concentrate on planning and creating small and practical little gardens for indoors during the winter months, and especially the arranging of unique and decorative window boxes . . .

• • •

Heard about in fashionable circles . . . Mrs. Horace Frazer and Mrs. Charles Proctor are compiling a list of very fashionable contract bridge enthusiasts to be invited to a contract party at Mrs. Proctor's home at a date yet to be announced.

SOCIETY TURNS OUT TO WELCOME JANE BANCROFT AS PROFESSIONAL ACTRESS

Gangsters' Mistake

A Carload of Killers Sets a Deathtrap for an Eleven-Year-Old Girl

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO, EVERYBODY:

You know, boys and girls, I've been hunting thrills a long time, and I've caught up with quite a few varieties of 'em. There was a time when I had the ambition to experience every one of them but that was when I was too young to know any better. No one man can have all the thrills there are. There are too doggone many different kinds of 'em.

Just the same, there are one or two sensations in Old Lady Adventure's bag of tricks that I have never quite lost my hankering to find out about. One of them is to learn what sort of a feeling it is to the Al Capones and the Legs Diamonds and the Dillingers of the world when somebody shoves a sub-machine gun in their faces.

Well, that is one sensation that I will never get to tell you—not from first hand information, anyway. The guy who learns about that sensation too often doesn't live to tell about it. But we've got a member in the Adventurers' Club who knows that feeling—who did live to tell about it—and who is going to give us the lowdown today.

And who is this tough egg who's been "on the spot" and lived through it? Is it Bloody Pete, Terror of the Gas House District, or Red Mike, the Scourge of Hell's Kitchen? Nope, it isn't either of those birds. It's eleven-year-old Virginia Brown, of 20th avenue, Paterson, N. J.

Virginia must be—let's see—twenty-two, now. But she was just eleven on that day in October, 1924, when she went on her usual Saturday morning automobile ride with her daddy. Virginia's dad was a salesman for wholesale grocery concern. His job was to drive around in a car, calling on grocers in various cities and towns in northern New Jersey. And every Saturday morning, regularly as clockwork, Virginia climbed into the car with him and went along while he covered his route.

This particular Saturday morning started out just like all the rest. Virginia got in the car and she and her dad went to Jersey City. Her dad stopped at half a dozen grocery stores, went inside, and came out after a while with his order. It was so much like any other Saturday that Virginia was beginning to get bored. She climbed into the back seat and started to play. Then, suddenly, things began to happen.

Her dad had just come out of another store, slid in behind the steering wheel and started to drive away, when a large touring car pulled up alongside of them and forced them in to the gutter. Virginia's dad pulled up to a stop and Virginia, knowing that her dad had a temper, reached over the back of the seat and took hold of his shoulder to keep him from getting into a scrap with the birds in the other car. As she did so, she turned her head to get a better look at the other car and what she saw made her fall back in her seat, limp with terror.

There were four men in that car, and three of them had pistols—nasty looking little snub-nosed automatics—all three of them pointing straight at her dad.

But it was the men behind those guns that held Virginia's eye with a sort of horrible fascination.

"They did'nt seem human," she says. "To this day I couldn't give you a description of any one of them. All I remember now is their eyes. Terrible, gleaming eyes that seemed to tell me, without a word being said, that I must not move or call for help."

For a second or two, Virginia stared back at those gleaming eyes—at those three wicked little automatics. She wanted to scream but she didn't dare. The slightest move on her part might result in her dad's death. So she just sat there—mute—horrified—waiting for her dad to be murdered—waiting, perhaps, to be murdered herself.

She stared at those men until she couldn't stand it any longer. Then she shut her eyes. Seconds dragged by like hours. She began wondering what it would sound like when those terrible guns began spitting their lead at her daddy. It was almost as hard to wait for the end with her eyes shut as it was with them open.

She was just about to open her eyes again when she heard a deafening roar from the direction of the other car. That, she thought, must be the end. She opened her eyes slowly, fully expecting to see the lifeless body of her father slumped over the wheel. But she didn't. At the same instant that she opened her eyes, her father, with a look of bewildered surprise on his face, was turning around to see if Virginia was all right.

The next thing Virginia saw was the other car. It was disappearing around a corner in a cloud of smoke from the exhaust pipe. It was the roar of the motor she had mistaken for the roar of pistols. In another instant, the street was as quiet as before. No one had noticed that quick maneuver of the gangster car and it was not until they had gone several blocks that Virginia and her dad realized what had been happening to them.

They had been "on the spot." Those birds must have been looking for somebody who resembled Virginia's dad. They had taken a good look, decided they had the wrong party and had left as suddenly as they had arrived.

Well, Jimmy, I'm putting you on the spot, too. Send in that true adventure story, or else! You'll gather in that ten-dollar check Jimmy, and like it, because I'm a very tough guy when I get started handing money around. And now watch out for tomorrow's thriller, It's "Two Shots in the Night."

TRUST BUYS

Into New STOCK Groups

By Hugh E. Brad-haw

One of the easier ways in which investors may check up on the policy followed in regard to their own funds is to study that employed by the managers of reliable investment trusts.

It is for this reason that we find the current report of Massachusetts Investors Trust of particular interest. In the last quarter, for instance, heavy commitments in the artificial silk industry were made. Industrial Rayon and Celanese are both newcomers to portfolios of the group of two score 000 shares each. An initial investment in Chrome Molybdenum, the extent of $601 shares, appears.

* * *

These investment representatives of two industries favorably commented on here. In the case of Chrome Molybdenum we have emphasized the smaller company in the field because of price and trading advantages similar to the large erage trader. It is the curb listed Molybdenum Company. Enough for comparison with other ideas. Massachusetts Investors Trust also reveals that its managers felt bank stock holdings needed overhauling. Chase and First National were sold and Manufacturers Trust newly bought for the first time. Another item of interest is the fact moderate amounts of both utilities and rails were purchased.

* * *

Notebook: That speaking engagement of Charles E. Gay, president of the New York Stock Exchange, at the first Chamber of Commerce Members' Luncheon this year, is certainly attracting comment . . . His remarks on inflation elsewhere assure him of a good sized and attentive audience this Thursday in Boston . . . Few titles are as intensely interested in financial and economic developments . . . As a money management Remington Rand listens carefully when the word inflation is mentioned . . . And it is surely in the air.

* * *

The present strength in stock prices offers a splendid opportunity to strip accounts of issues that clearly qualify as "high-flyers." We suggested selling these on just such a burst of strength as materialized. Our fears on the high prices for rails easily explained. However much their present estate is due to actual operating results, there is strong support short covering and bear accounts, brokers report, are loaded with the favorites. And even if the current move is temporary, those with cash there must be several potential and dangerous air pockets

MILLER 10-8 CHOICE OVER CORMIER

AUSTEN LAKE

Freddy Miller:
Or Helping Hint
For Larded Ladies

Austen Lake

IT WOULD BE FITTING for some of our lady citizens, who are packing more padding than their skeletons call for, to witness the agonies of Freddy Miller, the featherweight fight-champion, who has been having trouble melting his lumps down to the required weight-limit for tonight's fuss with Vernon Cormier at the Garden.

Needing to shuck off two more pounds from his already lean person, Freddy has severed relations with potatoes, bread and all filling foods and, for the last 48 hours, has fed on the juice of one lemon, with large helpings of air and imagination.

Two pounds are nothing to some of our suburban ladies who enjoy recurrent weaknesses for marshmallow pie and chawklit layer cake. But to a gent no larger than a standard horse-jockey and at the moment a ripple of rawhide, two pounds are like gouging off a hunk of his living flesh.

Miller Has the Incentive

THE STOUT LADIES HAVE no such compelling motive as the vulgar prize fighter, who is kept to his regimen by weight forfeits of between $100 and $1500.

Miller's determination is fortified by the added risk of being stripped of his title if, when he steps on the Commission scales this afternoon at 3 o'clock, he should tickle the bar on the high side.

Of course, in the business of putting it on and taking it off, Miller has probably removed a total of several thousand pounds during his career, shrinking his stomach with citrus juices to quiet the inner man, and subjecting himself to denials that are thought to be very good for the soul.

I recall hearing Mr. Eddie Shevlin, the ex-prize fighter and professional reducer, boast that he once took a picked company of some 40 fat ladies who stood about 10,000 pounds on the hoof and fried off 700 pounds in a week.

Mr. Shevlin thought this a remarkable feat, considering that he could not padlock the fat ladies for safe keeping and that, between times, they renewed part of their lost lard by visiting the neighborhood drugstores for triple-deck ham-on-swiss with mayonnaise.

Concerto in Buckley's Studio

MILLER WAS WORRIED this morning, after having submitted to hot-box treatments, rolled in thicknesses of blankets with bath towels around his head and letting the light bulbs melt him away from himself, to find that he was still over the 126 pounds, which is par for the featherweight course.

So he dropped in at Professor Johnny Buckley's studio on Friend street and asked a trainer to spank his nude portions.

For the better part of the morning the rubber played up and down his skin with the rhythm and snap of a shoe rag in the hands of an artistic bootblack.

After the trainer had performed a lovely rendition of "There's a Tavern in the Town" on Freddy's naked leg, he was given the other and asked to play "Irish Eyes," sweet and low. But when the concert was over and Freddy weighed himself on the gymnasium scales, he was lighter only by the heft of a soda cracker.

So he said, "There is only one thing to do. I will have to worry it off." And he went back to his hotel, where he pulled down the shades and began to fret about having his title forfeited by Commissioner Dan Kelly.

* * *

The Voice of Temptation

OF COURSE, MILLER HAS one advantage over the fat ladies. He can suffer the sensation of a stomach full of tacks and a mouthful of rabbit fur, knowing that after three o'clock he can dash into a restaurant and order a slab of roast-beef-medium with a pot of tea and a baked potato on the side.

But a lady wishing to halve herself must keep on at the cost of continuous sacrifice, jiggling her meat off on patent silver-machines and avoiding boiled vegetables, creamy salads and the little luxuries that are dear to a fat lady's heart.

In this she is subject to the same tempting curse as a drunkard in the later stage of the cure, perhaps yielding to the little inner voice which says:

"Well, we have licked that. Why not a cream tart to prove your self control."

And presently she has her cascades, billows and lumps back again and is as jiggly and bouncy as ever.

* * *

Suggestion to Larded Ladies

NOT BEING AN ELASTIC prize fighter, like Johnny Dundee, who used to melt himself down from a region of 150 pounds to 135 and even 126 and then eat his way back up the scale, Miller knows he will have to vacate his title soon, even if Vernon Cormier or some other likely lad does not knock it loose.

The battle of perspiration and fasting, which is known as "drying out," is conducive to heart whispers and premature age, and more than one fighter, like Kid Chocolate, has starved himself into a permanent state of collapse.

But if Freddie has nothing better to do when he vacates his class he could do very well for himself in the business of making fat ladies less fat.

He should know about this better than anyone else. But he should ask the fat ladies to put up weight forfeits.

Helen Keeps Active

Helen Wills Moody (remember that great tennis comeback at Wimbledon last summer?)—"Don't you think it is too early to talk about going to Wimbledon next year? Yes, I like to play tennis abroad.

"And I like to play it in the United States, too. I would like to have played in the nationals at Forest Hills, but I had been away so long as it was.

Helen Moody

"I practice four or five times a week and intend to play tennis as long as I am able.

"Golf? Never given it a thought. Swung a club a few times aboard ship returning from England. I'm studying oil painting now and it is ever so interesting."

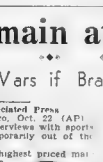
Joe Cronin (highest priced manager-shortstop in baseball, he cost the Boston Red Sox $250,000)—"Trader Horn" will be a piker compared to the swapping and bartering that is coming off at the national baseball meeting next December. The time is ripe for all clubs to trade around. The trend next season will be to developing young clubs. Tris Clarkshowed the way in this.



Joe Cronin

"The Red Sox may make some changes, depends on what the others do. We dropped negotiations for Jimmy Foxx of the Athletics because the price was too high. The deal may be reopened. That's holsum about me shifting from short to third base because I'm getting too heavy. Haven't varied a pound in three years. I'll be at short until somebody better pushes me off."

TERRIER SQUAD WORKS IN DARK

DOLAN'S CHANCE COMES AT B. U.

TO PLAY CENTER SATURDAY

By Murray Kramer

When the Terriers report to the supply room for clean socks, shirts and towels late this afternoon they will cast eyes on a row of kalsomined footballs.

And that means work. The ghost balls have been ordered by Coach Pat Hanley and the lighting apparatus has been connected.

The short 50 minute practice sessions will be forgotten for a while and the boys are going to work overtime until they prove that 50 minutes of practice is all they used.

There is going to be lots of falling on the ball, live tackling, stiff blocking and signal drills until the men can go through their assignments letter perfect.

And that is not all. There is going to be a wholesale shakeup, and several youngsters who have as yet been given little chance to show their merit because of the past three close games will be elevated to starting positions.

One boy in particular is worthy of mention. He is Charlie Dolan a stocky 160-pound center from Salem. While a pupil of Bill Reidy erick's high school Dolan ranked with the best.

Last year, however, he did not play freshman football due to an afternoon job. The year's absence hurt, and he has been third string center until last week when Johnny Morosini broke his ankle.

Then last Saturday, Frank Alder another sophomore, showed that he still needed experience before holding down a first string berth.

This drops the job right in Charlie's lap. If he shows well against Vermont next Saturday, he will become the ranking pivot man on the team. There are plenty who are willing to wager a bob or two that the Salem lightweight will make the grade.

Johnny Sabo, the Vermont coach is a very close friend of Pat Hanley's. They both coached at Northwestern together. But as far as offenses go, their work together in Chicago means little. Pat is a Pop Warner disciple, while Sabo leans to the wide open stuff he learned under Bob Zuppe at Illinois.

Bob McKelvey, who just returned from scouting Vermont last Saturday against Union discloses the information that the Catamounts have a strong first outfit but lack reserve strength. They have about 18 men who are equal to the Terrier first 18. If this group stands up, they will give the Hanlemen plenty of busy moments next Saturday afternoon.

Glenn Eigenheer, the Terriers final string tackle, certainly puts in a busy day. He works a "lobster shift" from midnight until 8 o'clock every morning and then goes to classes. From there he goes to practice. He gets his studying and sleep in between 6.30 and 11 o'clock each evening.

Suit for $10,000 has been filed in Boston municipal court by Mrs. Lucy Schaaf of Shelbyville mother of the late Ernie Schaaf, against Johnny Buckley manager of the heavyweight boxer.

Babe Ruth 'Dead' to Former Boss

By Associated Press

Los Angeles, Oct. 22—Col. Jacob Ruppert was here to a brewers convention today, but he was more willing to talk about baseball.

The owner of the New York Yankees and operator of a brewery, answered all questions including a few he asked himself.

Joe McCarthy has a two-year contract with the Yankees and so is more than satisfied with his present manager.

The club needs a good second baseman.

O'Hara Ships Stable West This Winter

By Bob Ahearn

Narragansett Park, Pawtucket, R. I., Oct. 22—Mrs. Walter O'Hara's Araho Stable will campaign on the West Coast this winter instead of Miami as was the custom last season.

At the conclusion of the current session the string of thoroughbreds will be shipped to Bay Meadows in care of trainers Don Cameron and Jack Carter. Howard and New Deal head the O'Hara band.

Ivy Blackburn, Jr., an arrival from Agawam, Blackburn formerly trained his own horses, but now is handling the book of jockey Johnny Deering. Deering and Jimmy Stout were tied for leading riding honors at the Springfield meet at the end of three weeks' racing. Both jockeys are now being accepting mounts.

Billy Stevens, custodian of the jocks room here, reports more than 40 riders have been issued badges. And within the next few days more than 50 more are expected in . . . A. J. Heffernan, clerk of scales at Gannett, was paddock and paroi judge at the Dallas Fair Meeting . . . Ed "Mike" Powers, trainer for C. W. Phelan, Boston radio official reports that Yankee Prince will be sent away for a rest from racing wars. Maybe next season.

Lack Jockeys For Classic

By Associated Press

Chicago Oct 22 With Jockey A "Texas" Anderson under suspension, Sportsman's Park, Chicago's half-mile track, faced a shortage of riding talent for its first races today.

Anderson was barred for the remainder of the meeting and a recommendation made by the stewards to the Illinois Racing Commission that his license be suspended, for his unsatisfactory ride of the horse Busy Span October 1 and for violation of the rule prohibiting jockeys from betting, except on their own mounts, and then only with the consent of the owner of the horse.

STAGGS At Bay

Bethlehem, Pa. (AP)—It will be a case of the Staggs at bay when Susquehanna and Moravian clash on the football field next Saturday. Paul, younger son of the famous Amos Alonzo Stagg who began his coaching duties 44 years ago, is coaching at Moravian College. Amos Alonzo, Jr., is the mentor at Susquehanna.

BROWN MEETS Penn in 1936

Providence, R. I.—Brown University will oppose the University of Penn next season on the gridiron, replacing Columbia on the Penn schedule. Penn will take the spot occupied by Syracuse on Brown's schedule this year.

Brown will oppose Boston University, Rhode Island State, Yale, Dartmouth, Harvard, Penn, Springfield, Columbia and Colgate next season.

B. C. Captain Original Hard Luck Kid

O'Brien Will Have Hard Time Regaining Post

By Walter Kiley

A short, wistful figure, [illegible] gathered in the utter frustration of his dreams and ambitions of a time when they seemed certain of fruition, sat huddled on the Boston College bench.

Beside him his mates cried hoarsely. Behind him victory-mad students and alumni shouted paeans of joy to the heavens.

It was a great day for the Eagles greatest since they had beaten those great 1919 1920 Yale teams at New Haven.

They were beating Michigan State's Lawless, the Mid West wonders.

But to Captain Joseph Red O'Brien of the Boston College eleven the victory meant less than nothing.

But because he, the squad's own choice and leader, was not in on the "kill."

Because he, Captain O'Brien, was forced to play the role of spectator just when new University Heights history was in the making, a game which would be told and retold with pardonable pride in the years to come by those who had participated.

All year long O'Brien, a Hyde Park boy, has displayed a cheerful grin to his mates and friends.

The red-haired captain has tried to make the best out of a bad situation. And hide his aching heart under those hard-to-summon grins.

It was an accident which prevented him from taking his rightful place as Boston College end. An accident which happened on the very day of the first game [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Mr. Boston Greeks Have a Man For It

By JACK CONWAY

SPEAKING of news: The Greeks have a new heavyweight wrestler who they think will avenge the defeat handed to Jim Londos by Dan O'Mahoney.

His name is Michael (not one of the Dublin, Ireland, Michaels) Debros. He weighs 217 pounds and is reported to be quite powerful.

Debros' invasion of America is sponsored by the Athletic Association of Byzantine, Greece.

Upon his arrival in New York the Greek wrestler visited the Archbishop of Greece in America. He conveyed to him the greetings of the Bishop of the Cathedral of Macedonia, Greece.

• • •

Dr. George Cyres, Boston physician, will act as Debros' American representative. He has signed his protege to appear in a preliminary bout on the Ed Don George-Cary Pojello bout at the Garden on Friday night.

• • •

Londos has not wrestled since he was upset by O'Mahoney at Fenway Park. He has been taking things easy in California and has not made known whether he will attempt a mat comeback.

• • •

Mr. Boston

'GANSETT OPENS

THE form players got a break at the opening of Narragansett Park. The horses that clicked at Suffolk Downs and at Agawam showed to advantage over the Pawtucket strip.

I liked the snappy way the races were run off. Post time was at 1:15, and the last race was over at 4:45.

Walter O'Hara eliminated the long, dreary post parades. I find that the average race-goer is opposed to long delays between races and tiresome post parades.

Darkness now sets in at 5 o'clock, and it is for the best interests of the public and the various tracks to get the races over early.

O'Hara expressed himself as satisfied with the opening day handle of $243,446.

Top Row, conqueror of Discovery, has been shipped through to Arlington Downs, Texas. An effort was made to get A. A. Baroni to send Top Row against Discovery in the $10,000 handicap at Coney Island.

• • •

Billy Ames was quite happy when Guardian won the eighth race at Narragansett, even though the payoff was only $4. Ames told everybody in the press box his horse would win. As a result there was considerable jubilation when Sea Fox failed to cut down the leader in the stretch run.

• • •

Grog and Dojo were other favorites who proved that the form player occasionally gets a break. At the recent Suffolk Downs meeting 34 per cent of the favorites won. Apparently the favorites are also going to have some good days at Narragansett.

• • •

The records, however, prove that nobody ever beat the races playing favorites. Those few persons who have cashed in at the major tracks have done so backing good horses who breezed away from the Bahr gate at odds of 2 and 3 to 5.

• • •

The quickest way to go broke at a race track is to play the odds on favorites to win. Those persons who backed Discovery against Top Row at Narragansett and at Suffolk Downs will give evidence as to the truth of this statement.

• • •

CORMIER'S SOCK

YOU MUST always give serious consideration to a puncher like Vernon Cormier when he gets his big opportunity in a title bout. He knocked out the Australian featherweight and lightweight champions and says he will also lip over the resourceful Miller if he can click with one of his heavy blows.

• • •

Featherweights have always put up torrid battles in Boston rings. The Finnegan-Suggs, Fuller-Suggs and Kilbane-Walsh matches were among the greatest ever staged in this city.

• • •

Miller, at the age of 24, is one of the world's foremost fighting men. He has done everything asked of him as champion. He is my idea of a great titleholder.

GREEN KEYED FOR STADIUM STRUGGLE

By Bill Grimes

Unless I'm very much off the beaten path, Dartmouth will show to better advantage this week in the Harvard Stadium than it has at any time this season.

After the Brown game, the experts agreed that the Big Green was not impressive.

They dwelled at length on the Bruins' errors, which were responsible for four of the six Dartmouth touchdowns.

They could not see the Big Green attack functioning against major opponents, and the line did not measure up to their expectations.

Due to the fact that Dartmouth is one of the few unbeaten, untied teams and the top scoring machine of the college ranks, and Harvard has been beaten in its last two starts, the publishing of the opinions of the all knowing ones is a fine build up for Saturday's tilt.

One phase of Dartmouth's performance against Brown which the experts failed to comment on was that the Indians of the North were not in the proper frame of mind to show at their best.

BROWN? POOH!

For years Dartmouth coaches have been unable to key up their charges for Brown. The players refuse to respond to Brown game fight talks.

For obvious reasons, then Coach Earl Blaik declared that he was very much dissppointed over the article of football played by the Big Green against Brown.

The Big Green is now through with the "push-over" half of its schedule and must now get down to serious, sustained, hard football.

Blaik and his assistants started today to key their Indians for Harvard and also revamp the back field combinations.

BIG AND FAST

Although Conti, Casey and King are fast and shifty, they lack the necessary weight to withstand the pummelling they will encounter in the Stadium, the Yale Bowl and the Palmer Stadium.

Undoubtedly, when the Indians take the field against Harvard, Johnny Handrahan and Pop Nairne, will be in the starting lineup. Handrahan and Nairne are powerful as well as fast and have served their major game apprenticeships.

They saw their first service of the season at Brown and gave fine accounts of themselves, especially Nairne, who supplied most of the Big Green offensive work.

TIGER SUBS Show Power

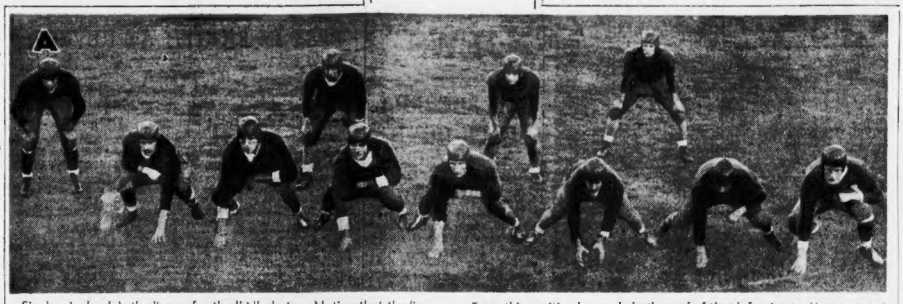
Princeton, N. J., Oct. 22 (INS)—Tiger Coach Fritz Crisler put his varsity squad into uniform today for a long workout in preparation for next Saturday's game with Cornell. The scrubs and second-stringers went through their paces yesterday, with the regulars confined to a short signal drill. In a 45-minute game between the reserves and the scrubs, the reserves clicked handsomely to win, five touchdowns to one.

Rendall Back

Tufts' captain and guard, Jack Randall, has recovered from his rib fracture and is expected to face Williams Saturday.

TO GAIN, START MUST BE CORRECT, SAYS HANLEY

Harvard to Show Offense Saturday



Single wingback is the lineup for the "A" photo. Notice that the linemen look straight ahead and that the wingback is outside of the end. From this position he can help the end of the defensive tackle, scoot out for passes or come around back for reverses.

(Pictures from International News Photograph Service)

Double wingback is the other well known formation, and it is depicted in this "C" photo. Notice the way both halfbacks face each other slightly at an angle. Most plays are run from these three formations. Amateur elevens would do well to clip photos.

Key Men Return

BILODEAU AND LANE TO FACE INDIANS

Though Dartmouth represents the highest-geared scoring machine in the East, Harvard hopes to make its first real offensive gesture against the Indians from the North in the Stadium Saturday.

So far this season the Crimson's best backfield has been on the sidelines with injuries, which crippled the new offense which was to be inaugurated by Dick Harlow.

With Tommy Bilodeau and Franny Lane scheduled to play against Dartmouth, and with Don Jackson slowly recovering from a broken collarbone and working out daily, Harvard is ready for progress.

Both Bilodeau and Lane received official approval today from Dr. Gus Thorndike, team physician, after the former had taken part in Monday's fierce scrimmage without suffering any evil effects.

Sam Greeley, substitute center, who performed so well against Holy Cross in his first varsity game, also is ready to reopen his fight with Bobby Jones for the pivot position.

Lane, still handicapped by an old leg injury, will not start, but probably will get into the game for a short period.

Offsetting the return of Bilodeau and Lane is the loss of Francis Maser, six-foot-six-inch 210 pound tackle, who was clipped in the Army game, and suffered a painful leg injury.

Bob Watson, 190-pound junior, probably will succeed Maser, although closely pressed by Bill Burton, 1934 regular, and Jim Glendinning for the honor.

Grid Injury

By L. B. "Pat" Hanley

Head Coach at Boston University

(Supplied by Boston Evening American)

This was the case when the Boston Evening American started its current series of "Famous Plays of Famous Coaches." Different plays have been diagrammed from single wingback, double wingback and the Notre Dame box.

Many club teams, especially the younger ones, have written in desiring exact information about the spacing and correct position of backs from these three formations.

For this reason, there is no diagrammed play today. Instead, there are photos of the single wingback, double wingback, and Notre Dame box in order to show how a team should line up before starting its attack.

The Warner system is the most popular today. Colleges generally use single and double wingback formations. High schools, as a rule, stick to the single, as it would be senseless to give secondary school boys an offense which is too detailed for them to grasp easily.

The Notre Dame box has many followers. Several institutions use this formation exclusively except, of course, when they go into a kick formation. It has much power, and all sorts of plays can be run from it.

One difference you will notice in the line, if you check the photos closely, is that the ends in the Notre Dame system are a step away from the tackle while in the Warner they play a tight line.

Since Rockne died, the Notre Dame offense has developed many variations. "Rock's" pupils have started to put their own ideas into the system, and as a result you may see occasional variations from the fundamental starting positions.

A thing that is particularly worthy of notice in the double wingback photo is that the two halfbacks get into position facing each other slightly. The purpose of this is to allow them to pivot back for reverses or go straight ahead without giving the defense any information.

Tomorrow the Boston Evening American will photograph and diagram a reverse play which Andy Kerr has used with great success at Colgate. Pat Hanley will describe the play.

HARLOW AT MAT GO

To Cheer Charlie Strack at Arena

Strack was one of the football stars at Colgate when Harlow was coach there a few years ago, and Harlow wants to see if Strack is as much of a star in the wrestling world.

HARTNETT MOST VALUABLE PLAYER

BERGER SIXTH ON N. L. POLL

Dizz Dean Loses Out

By Associated Press

Philadelphia, Oct. 22—Charles (Gabby) Hartnett, veteran catcher of the pennant-winning Chicago Cubs, was voted the most valuable player in the National League for 1935 today by the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

Hartnett, who went to the Cubs in 1922 from Worcester, Mass., has played his entire major league career with the Bruins. He was voted 75 points against 66 for Dizzy Dean of the St. Louis Cardinals, who ran second. Dean won the 1934 award.

Berger Considered

Hartnett was first choice of five members of the committee; Dean of two. The only other player who was a first choice was Wally Berger, outfielder of the Boston Braves, tied for sixth honors with 20 points.

Joe Medwick, St. Louis, 37; Carl Hubbell, New York, 29; Wally Berger, Boston, 28; Bill Terry, New York, 20; Augie Galan, Chicago, 18; Pepper Martin, St. Louis, 18; Hank Leiber, New York, 11; Lon Warneke, Chicago, 9; Ernie Lombardi, Cincinnati, 8; Frank Frisch, St. Louis, 7; Cy Blanton, Pittsburgh, 5; J. Moore, Phillies, 5; Ethan Allen, Phillies, 4; Gus Mancuso, New York, 4; Paul Derringer, Cincinnati, 4; Mel Ott, New York, 3; Paul Dean, St. Louis, 2; J. Collins, St. Louis, 2; C. Davis, Philadelphia, 2; and Paul Waner, Pittsburgh, 1. Fred Lindstrom, Chicago, Travis Jackson, New York, and Dolph Camilli, Philadelphia, 1 each.

Honorable List

Players receiving honorable mention were Bill Jurges, Larry French and Phil Cavarretta of Chicago; Leo Durocher and Virgil Davis of St. Louis, Floyd Sherman of Cincinnati, Hal Schumacher and Joe Moore of New York, Sam Leslie, Van Mungo, Tony Cuccinello, Jim Bucher and Al Lopez of Brooklyn; Jimmy Wilson, Philadelphia, and Floyd Young, Pittsburgh.

COLGATE SET For Holy Cross

Hamilton, N. Y., Oct. 22 (INS)—Chances for a Colgate victory over Holy Cross when the Red Raiders meet the Crusaders at Worcester Saturday were heightened today by the return of four "cripples" to the lineup.

George Vadas, on the sidelines since the opening game with Niagara, will be in the starting line, and Bob Billings, Bill Davidson and Red Chesebro have been pronounced fit for service.

MR. AND MRS. IS THE NAME

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

OLYMPIC Head Warns JEWS

GEN. SHERRILL BACK HOME

By Universal Service

New York, Oct. 21—Brigadier-General Charles H. Sherrill, one of the three Americans on the Olympics games international committee, was met at the dock upon his return from Europe by a protest committee from the committee on fair play in sports, asking his support in urging withdrawal of American teams from the 1936 Olympics in Berlin.

Withdrawal of United States athletes was asked by the committee in a letter handed to General Sherrill by William B. Chamberlain, secretary of the organization.

The letter cited reports of Nazi atrocities and declared that because of both physical and psychological barriers it would be impossible to send American athletes of Jewish extraction to Berlin.

General Sherrill refused to make his answer to the request for withdrawal of Americans from the games. He said:

"Any decision that must be made on this issue will have to be up to the committee as a whole.

"The Jews have no better friend than I am. I can see, however, that this situation can become very serious if they continue to prod us.

"The several thousand young Americans making this protest should realize they are preventing 125,000,000 people from participating in the games.

General Sherrill was also informed New York Supreme Court Justice Jeremiah T. Mahoney, president of the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States, has openly charged that the Nazi government has violated pledges to uphold the Olympic games code and that he has written a letter to Dr. Theodore Lewald, head of the German Olympic committee, charging Germany with discriminating against Catholic and Jewish athletes. He demanded Dr. Lewald reising his post.

Danno Pins Indian in 31:30

The young Celt threw the aborigine in 31:30 with a body press just when it seemed as if he were about to be pinned himself with the Indian Death Lock.

The Indian claimed Danno had stunned him with his elbow and started to mix things up after the decision went to the Irishman. But not for long. 'Not with Danno.

Captain Hurt

Philadelphia, Oct. 22—Jim Russell, Temple captain and tackle will be out of action at least three weeks with a hip injury, suffered in the Carnegie Tech game.

Squad Fails to Receive Praise

Hanover, N. H. (AP)—If the Dartmouth boys thought they were in for praise after their top-sided victory over woefully weak Brown, they were mistaken. Earl Blaik and the rest of the coaches told them in no uncertain terms that their blocking was terrible and their tackling worse. Brown thought the Indians were pretty good in both these departments.

CAMDEN LAGER IS RUNNING FREELY

BEST IN EIGHTH AT REVERE

By Sam Cohen

Camden Lager, with five wins and two seconds in the last seven races, has the call in the eighth race tonight at Wonderland Park.

Although opposed by potential Derby winners in Risky Leader, winner of Saturday night's futurity, Easter John and Brown Sugar, the Roy Rutland speedster seems to have the edge on the pack at this distance.

Lily Breeze and Sky, two more Derby contestants, will match strides in the tenth race, with the latter having the edge.

FIRST RACE—3-16THS MILE—SILVER CUTLET—JUSTA SUNBEAM—ODD BOY

4 Silver Cutlet	2-1	60	N. G. Allen	Speedy schoolings.
5 Justa Sunbeam	3-1	61	Gertrude Broderick	Second last time.
8 Odd Boy	3-1	61	L. E. Thompson	Should be up there.
3 Broadway Bill	4-1	57	Tom Griffin	May get part of it.
9 Running Mate	10-1	54	Frank Austin	Post position helps.
2 Duxbury Farms	15-1	51	Golden Bear Kennels	May be best long shot.

SILVER CUTLET comes as a recommendation but well recommended. May be the best one here. JUSTA SUNBEAM will furnish the contention. OLD BOY has schooled well enough to be considered as dangerous to the top ones.

SECOND RACE—FUTURITY—NANCY KALE—GAY ATTIRE—BUCK WHIRLWIND

7 Gay Attire	3-2	59	Southern Kennels	Second last time out.
3 Buck Whirlwind	4-1	60	Fred Phillips	Can do better than last.
5 Midnight Cannon	5-1	56	Swan Kennels	Last not true.
8 Fanny Walker	8-1	57	Copper City Kennels	Good second last.
1 Royal Vic	12-1	53	Dr. R. A. Pecoraro	Hasn't shown much.

THIRD RACE—5-16THS MILE—SWEET DICTATOR—UGLY—MY ROBERTA

1 Ugly	5-2	58	C. R. Findlater	Due to repeat last.
4 My Roberta	3-1	63	N. G. Allen	Likes the distance.
6 Golden Fay	5-1	61	A. W. Waltby	Showed three out last.
5 Speedy Denny	8-1	61	Gus Mahs	Slim chance.
3 Wahb's Roll	10-1	64	W. J. Dickinson	Hasn't shown much.
8 Shining Town	12-1	72	Oscar Dahlberg	Fair boys always.
2 Wild Thought	15-1	63	Jess Williams	Not best.

SWEET DICTATOR would seem to have the edge here, though UGLY may be the one. MY ROBERTA has been a strong finisher and may furnish the surprise.

FOURTH RACE—FUTURITY—CHUMMY BOY—JUST KETCHEL—BOLD KID

5 Chummy Boy	2-1	55	Hollywood Rts. Ken.	Has the call here.
4 Just Ketchel	3-2	58	Frank Athanasaw	Can better last.
3 Bold Kid	3-1	58	J. J. Keenan	Due to come in.
1 Zane Time	5-1	54	Sid Manor	Fast in sprints.
2 Ja-Pure	8-1	63	N. S. Co.	May surprise.
8 High Court	10-1	61	Oswald Bros. Ken.	Has early speed.
6 Mental Telegram	12-1	68	Oscar Dahlberg	Needs racing.

FIFTH RACE—FUTURITY—TWINKLE LADDIE—LITTLE DOGGIE—SKIM-A-LONG

1 Little Doggie	2-1	57	Copper City Ken.	Second last time.
6 Girl Crazy	5-1	60	Mrs. M. Failing	Can upset the works.
4 Bold Star	6-1	60	Mrs. Opal Warden	Improving nightly.
7 Why Lie	10-1	60	R. E. Jasper	Has good position.

TWINKLE LADDIE has the call here on the basis of a bang-up second to Luckies Please Friday night. LITTLE DOGGIE should furnish the contention, with SKIM-A-LONG figuring to get part of the award.

SIXTH RACE—FUTURITY—PRANCING STEP—LUCKIES PLEASE—DINTY DENNIS

4 Prancing Step	2-1	66	Roanoke Kennels	Should score another.
7 Luckies Please	5-2	66	A. M. Chinn	Won last; moved up.
3 Ben Officer	5-1	61	N. H. Taylor	May upset the dope.
5 Marie	6-1	61	Joseph Little	Dangerous; threw out last.
8 Junette	8-1	62	H. E. Alderson	Dangerous; threw out last.
2 Lenny's Son	10-1	63	Thompson	Has shown ability.

SEVENTH RACE—5-16THS MILE—CUSTODIAN—AL DABNER—JIMMY FOX

5 Custodian	2-1	62	Roanoke Kennels	Just about due.
7 Jimmy Fox	3-1	60	J. D. Hall	May surprise.
4 Tipsy Jew	6-1	62	Charles Hudson	Can take it all.
8 Masked Traffic	8-1	62	Mrs. Opal Warden	Has shown last.
6 Coin Collector	10-1	65	Augusta Kennels	Still trying.

CUSTODIAN showed real signs last time of breaking through. This may be the time. AL DABNER slipped from his early form but is reported ready again. JIMMY FOX hasn't shown much, but this may be the spot.

EIGHTH RACE—FUTURITY—CAMDEN LAGER—RISKY LEADER—EASTER JOHN

2 Easter John	3-1	63	Red Sunday	Can take it all.
4 Brown Sugar	3-1	60	Sid Manor	May surprise them all.
5 Tommy	6-1	63	Dewey Leahy	Dangerous; throw out last.
6 Court House	10-1	63	Oswald Bros. Ken.	Has shown little.
7 Lily Breeze	12-1	60	J. D. Hall	Can take it all.
8 My Daddy	15-1	71	A. E. Miles	Could surprise them all.

CAMDEN LAGER has the call on the basis of past performances at this distance. RISKY LEADER can do it, but hardly from this box. EASTER JOHN has an outside chance.

NINTH RACE—FUTURITY—TUZIE—JUST RIP AND TARE—TIM'S ACE

7 Just Rip and Tare	5-2	53	W. E. Forbes	Settle for one.
5 Senator Siracusa	4-1	53	J. D. Hall	May cut the distance.
8 Chink	8-1	53	H. E. Alderson	Can take it all
1 Imperial Dresser	10-1	53	H. Callaghan	Seems to have slipped.
4 Preacher	12-1	62	J. E. Miles	Has shown little.
2 Al Lee	15-1	62	Art Wilson	Has speed.

TUZIE appears to be the one here. JUST RIP AND TARE could do it from an outside box. TIM'S ACE will be dangerous and may surprise.

TENTH RACE—5-16THS MILE—AFRICAN DEMON—JUST MAX—LILY BREEZE

3 Just Max	5-2	68	A. Haberman	Will battle for it.
2 Lily Breeze	3-1	58	Geo. Klippell, Jr.	Better than last.
7 Tarras Speed	5-1	57	Jess Bingham	May do it.
8 Rock Roll	6-1	57	Geo.E. Hackett	Would surprise.
5 Sky	10-1	63	Miss Freda Koontz	Bad post position.
4 Cave Man	12-1	62	H. E. Alderson	Last two poor.

AFRICAN DEMON has the call on recent races, but JUST MAX and LILY BREEZE are capable of taking it all. RURAL LASS had a bad night last out but can upset the dope.

COLLEGE Elevens BETTER

RUNYON STICKS TO IT

By Damon Runyon

Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service

New York, Oct. 22—We were discussing our professional versus college football argument with Mr. Grantland Rice.

You may recall our contention that a real good college outfit can whip the best of the professional teams.

The rumor that we asserted that the college team would not only whip the pros, but would run the pros out of the football yard and up the street ten blocks, is not exactly correct.

Anyway, Mr. Rice was reminded of a story.

It seems that a famous Middle Western football coach was induced to view a professional game one day involving a couple of the star pro teams.

He was warned in advance that he would see a brand of football vastly superior to the kind with which he was familiar.

He eyed the field a few minutes, and then commented:

"Why, there's a lot of my boys down there. Don't try to tell me that after three years with me there's any more football left in them."

LEGS ARE GONE

The gruelling grind of a long college campaign on the football field is scarcely calculated to improve a young fellow physically, no matter what the exponents of outdoor exercise tell you.

For one thing, the human legs, which are very important in football, are rarely the same after a college campaign.

The reason few collegians who have planned much football are good athletes in other fields is generally because of "football legs," which include "track knees," a knee of this kind being inclined to fly loose under stress.

It is inconceivable that when the young men leave college and turn to professional football, they are as sound, physically, as when they started out.

So then, is speed and endurance alone, the college football players are probably ahead of the professionals. Certainly they are younger, and youth is a tremendous asset in most forms of athletics.

STAN KOTSKA?

The professionals are fond of pointing out instances of fellows who were great stars in their college football days failing to make the professional grade, but Mr. Rice, who knows about as much football as anybody around, had a comment that may be quite illuminating on this point.

Mr. Rice mentioned the case of a young man who made football history at his college, and who is now playing with the pros, but not very brilliantly.

"They are not using him right," said Mr. Rice. "They are not employing his talents in the proper manner.

"You saw that great team at Minnesota last year," we said. "How would it have done with one of the best of the pro teams?"

"It would have been very close," replied Mr. Rice.

But, the only way to definitely settle the argument would be to put on a game between one of the best of the college teams, and the best of the pro teams, a test that would produce one of the biggest gates in football history if played in the East or the Middle West.

We are informed that at least a couple of colleges that think they have unusually good teams this year would not be adverse to the meeting, if they can get the cooperation of their conference associates.

LANDER Cuts Whiskers

Manhatta, Kan., Oct. 22 (AP)—They say that Jim Lander looks better without his whiskers. Jim is the Kansas State quarterback who looked like a member of the House of David ball team until after the game with the Fort Hays Tigers. Have won a 3-0 victory, and Jim decided the whiskers weren't very lucky after all, so he shaved.

Curley's

Boy Makes Good at Georgetown

Washington (AP)—Leo Curley, son of the fighting governor of Massachusetts, is a member of the Georgetown University football squad, and they say he has many of the attributes of his father. He is a blocky lad who likes the going rough. He is slated to see action against the powerful New York University team Saturday.

RED RAIN Reported UNSOUND

By the Associated Press

C. V. Whitney's Red Rain does not appear to be the racing colt that his stable and the racing public believed him to be. The hopeful winner has had three opportunities to duplicate his Saratoga victory but has failed.

Red Rain's defeat in the mile of the Jockey Club stakes at Churchill Downs Saturday left no doubt in the minds of horsemen that the horse was somewhat overrated. It is a common report that the horse is unsound and that a winter's rest may bring him back into the form expected of him.

Pimlico is expecting a banner meeting this fall. Stables from all over the country are shipping to Maryland. The Maryland futurity will be run November, 2; the Riggs, November 9; the Walden, November 11, and the Druid, November 14.

Add the name of Psychic Bid to the list of Bargain yearling purchases by Mrs. Dodge Sloane. Like Cavalcade, High Strung and Time Clock, the three-year-old whirlwind has won his cost many times over.

Abolish Income Taxes

Democracy Menaced

To accomplish this he urged the immediate and unconditional repeal of the iniquitous Sixteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution, which since 1913 has permitted a succession of demagogic Congresses to practice a form of rapacious political pillage utterly without precedent in our entire preceding history.

"The Government," he said, "cannot support the people. The people must support the Government. So let's get the Government down so it's easy to tote."

GOVERNOR TALMADGE'S position is an absolutely sound one, and is one to which the country must and will be compelled to turn.

For the income tax has proved itself to be A FATAL ERROR!

It is responsible not only for the present era of ruinous extravagance but also, and more important, for the class distinction which threatens to DIVIDE THE NATION and DESTROY DEMOCRACY.

Amendment Sixteen inserted it to the vitiation of the whole spirit of the Constitution and its guarantees of liberty, equality and justice.

ON THE DAY THAT AMENDMENT WAS PASSED THE BILL OF RIGHTS WAS NULLIFIED!

The Sixteenth Amendment, like the late and unlamented Eighteenth, builds bureaucracy, creates spies and snoopers, invites interference with individual rights and prescribes extortion and oppression.

FURTHERMORE, the stark discrimination and injustice of a confiscatory income tax drives creative brains out of the country—brains which create industries, brains which create jobs, brains which create prosperity, brains which build a great nation—the kind of brains which have built our nation and established here the highest standard of wages, the highest standard of living, the highest standard of comfort and health and happiness in the world.

What Italy Could Do

Mussolini's Power

An American newspaperman wrote, reminding England that airplanes make it possible for a smaller country to injure a bigger one seriously, just as the revolver makes it easy for a small man to dispose of a big man.

He warned London that, if driven to desperation, Mussolini would probably send a thousand or more of his bombing planes to London, particularly to Buckingham Palace, the House of Commons and the Bank of England.

It was no attack, it was a friendly warning.

Mussolini would make the "ATTACK."

Economy Measure

Biennials Strongly Approved

Despite the cold reception so far encountered on Beacon Hill by the economy idea of having the Legislature convene but once in two years, the biennial plan has been strongly approved elsewhere.

All but two votes cast at the conclusion of the meeting were found to favor biennials.

Fitness Test Only

DeCelles Is Right

State Insurance Commissioner Francis J. DeCelles acted with pleasing promptness in warning insurance firms they must NOT refuse to grant compulsory insurance for automobiles merely because of the age of the cars.

"Insurance companies must accept all automobiles which are mechanically perfect," Mr. DeCelles declared.

"Praise Indeed"

From G-Men's Chief

Thomas Morton back in the 18th century wrote some immortal words about praise.

The idea then was that, if it came from the lips of Sir Hubert Stanley, it was "praise indeed."

A modern version would be that when police work is lauded by J. Edgar Hoover, head of the G-men, it's REAL praise.

So the Boston Police Department is entitled to thrill with pride when this celebrated Hoover says it has the finest department of ballistics and bureau of identification in our nation.

Deaf, But Not Dumb

By Nelson Harding

They waste their breath on Uncle Sam,
However loud they sing.
He doesn't hear a thing.

They won't be heard although they screech
Until their throats are numb.
To them he's deaf, but his remarks

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Oct. 22—Iowa, from either modesty or paucity, for many years seemed to have the scantiest supply of figures in the world of art and literature. At the New York teas, one met celebrities from every state in the union, but somehow seldom any from Iowa.

From surface indications about all that Iowa could brag about artistically was Ruth Suckow, with her fine tales of homely Iowa life and that artist, whose name escapes me, who has made at least a success d'estime with paintings of rural people and scenes from this same Iowa milieu.

O. O. McIntyre

But lately Iowa has come to the artistic forefront with a bang. Foremost is the Iowan, Darryl F. Zanuck, whose tremendous conceptions in movies have bestowed a salary of $250,000 a year. Also MacKinlay Kantor in the field of novel and short story and poems of Civil War.

Many regard his "The Voice of Bugle Ann" as the most sublime dog story. Then there is Kent Taylor, whose recent prominence as a leading man in the cinema makes him somewhat a figure in that line. Incidentally, Indiana is usually foremost at celebrity gatherings.

Monta Bell, the director, who has been over in London trying to see just what a right-handed boy could do in a left-handed town, also turning out a movie script called 'War," mastered the monocle while there.

And determined to face the hoots by sporting it upon his return. But coming up the bay his nerve deserted and he went to the rail, opened his eyes wide and let it plop, into the sea.

The best reports are he will remain in England, make one more picture portraying the life of Samuel Pepys, ascend to the knighthood and retire. He has an annuity paying $19,000 a year.

The first monocle I ever saw was worn by Arliss, when he was touring as leading man with Mrs. Fiske. I cornered him for an interview at a hotel breakfast table in Cincinnati.

I rather hoped it would drop into his oatmeal so I could quote Charlie Russell's famous line about his spectacles. Said Russell:

Berton Braley recently broke his own record by selling some verse, for a very fair price, on their 139th trip through the mails. The magazine which bought them had, in the course of the five years the poems had been traveling, rejected the same verse six times.

It is true postage ate up about half the price, but postage is general overhead in the poet's trade and is charged, not to individual manuscript, but to general expenses. Bonnus Burke sent a poem to London Punch now and then for eight years. Finally it was printed.

One of Manhattan's notable summer visitors used to be Henry Watterson, the Louisville editor. He came to town for his holiday when the metropolis was hottest and emptiest.

In the cool of the evening he would forgather at the Lambs with cronies and Marse Henry would insist upon fashioning his own version of the delectable and cooling mixture called the julep, bringing for the occasion choice sprigs from his Kentucky mint bed.

Wilton Lackaye usually managed to be in town, and when they started yarning no listener went home until dawn.

James Montgomery Flagg was the leader in the summer vogue of going necktieless. But he always carried a spare—due to the hoity-toity rule in the spiffy spires where most magazine offices are.

Those without ties are banned from elevators. Flagg has a bookon atrocity of a Gay 90 vintage for such exigencies. For his years—and he's no Baby LeRoy —Flagg is the most industrious artist of his day.

Aside from his enormous magazine output, he is a judge at practically every beauty contest and never misses a party. His boon companions in relaxation are Jeff Machamer and Ham Fisher.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

WHAT PRICE . . . HITCH-HIKING?

"That," said my friend the Thinker, as our car swung around the curve, "is the most significant development in America today."

He didn't look like a "significant development," the husky young lumber in filthy rags, who stood thumbing us for a ride. For a moment I hesitated—I hate passing anyone up. But all these hold-ups—you never can tell.

Elsie Robinson

Besides, in our state, if there's an accident and a hitch-hiker is hurt, he can hold you legally responsible and get heavy damages. So we slid by. The tramp shook his fist—cursed us.

"Not very polite is he?" I answered. "But why a significant development?"

STEP IN HISTORY

"Can't you see it for yourself? That fellow wasn't just asking for a lift. He felt he had a right to it and that you had no right to refuse it. That isn't just rudeness—it's a step in history.

"Think back thirty years—even twenty. Would an obvious tramp have expected to share the family buggy; cursed you if he were refused? Of course he wouldn't. Decent people have always believed in giving the other fellow a hand—always will. But the other fellow didn't demand it as his right—not until he'd done something to earn it.

"There were certain things we always respected. Among them, any man's right to enjoy the simple comforts he'd been able to accumulate through his own hard work. Didn't matter whether a man were a ditch digger or a millionaire—he had a right to the fruit of his own labor and a right to his privacy.

A NEW ATTITUDE

"But there's a new attitude now. Everywhere. You can't just put it into words, but you can see it in those hitch-hikers. The way they expect you to give them a lift—"

"But haven't they a right to expect it?" I questioned, puzzled. "These are tough times. Many a man can't help being idle. You and I—we've both been penniless. We know how helpless a fellow is before the System. If, in spite of our best efforts, we're busted—"

"But that's just the point!" my friend cried hotly. "That fellow—and millions like him—don't give a hoot for the old American 'best effort' theory. They think they've a right to anything they need, whether they've struggled, themselves, or not.

"You and I, when we were young, expected to try to make good for ourselves before we asked for help. Democracy means we should be fair and generous—but it doesn't mean we should get things free. Even Nature doesn't give life free. Even a turnip has to work to survive.

"But now—they demand things as their right, regardless of their personal record. Hitch-hikers? I tell you this hitch-hiking idea is the most dangerous thing that has ever happened to us. And it's spreading.

"We're all getting infected with it. Unconsciously, we're all beginning to feel we should have things handed to us as our natural right. WHERE'S IT GOING TO LEAD US? WHERE'S IT GOING TO LAND AMERICA?"

I couldn't answer. The underdog—heaven knows he's often had a raw deal. And many a man may work his head off, yet get nowhere through no fault of his own.

Yet—does that mean we should swing to the other extreme? Abolish all sense of personal responsibility?

Allow people to feel they've a right to anything they want—anything the other fellow has—regardless of their own records? And suppose we give it to them—

How long will anyone have anything?

What's YOUR answer?

Isn't It So?

The strange thing is that man is satisfied with so little in himself and demands so much in others.

New Threat to Italy

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Edwin C. Hill

It is barely possible—just barely—that a British insurance organization may succeed in curbing the ambitions of Mussolini where the most stringent efforts of the British government have so far failed.

News comes to us that Lloyds of London is planning to deny all forms of insurance to Italy.

The importance of that threat lies in the fact that Italian shipping carries a vast amount of insurance with Lloyds. A denial of protection to the Italian merchant marine would be a terrific blow, indeed.

Not only Mussolini's shipping would be left unprotected, but other forms of insurance and reinsurance would be closed to Italian applicants through the tremendous prestige of that world-famous organization known as Lloyds.

UNIQUE AMBITION

Two of the principal Italian insurance companies, the Assicurazione Generale and Reunione Adriatica di Sicurita, habitually apply to Lloyds and to other British insurance companies to cover their own risks.

Other forms of insurance may provide the greater revenue and the more romantic side of the business, but the salty air of the sea still pervades every nook and corner of the house in Leadenhall street.

RECORDS OF CENTURIES

This writer has seen there the big green volumes which have recorded the loss of every known ship for centuries past.

He has seen, too, the telegraph board with the yellow slips that carry stories of the minor tragedies, collisions, disablements in storms and groundings, all reported daily by the fifteen hundred agents established by Lloyds throughout the Seven Seas.

When the Titanic, the greatest ship that ever sailed the seas until the Normandie was launched, ripped her bottom out on a North Atlantic iceberg, the disaster cost Lloyds $7,000,000.

And the money was forthcoming as swiftly as the $40 claim paid to the youngster whose toy ship was adjudged a total wreck when it sank in the pond in Kensington Gardens.

A thousand and one such tales are to be found in the doomsday books of the corporation. This great and fascinating institution dates back to the year 1688, when Edward Lloyd ran a coffee house in Tower street for the benefit of seafaring men and merchants.

Samuel Pepys, in his diary, recalls a visit to Lloyds Coffee House at which time he heard the tale of how a rogue had substituted junk for a valuable cargo of an old hulk and had then abandoned her, expecting that she would founder and sink and that he could collect heavy insurance.

But an ill wind for this disciple of barratry blew the waterlogged craft to the French coast where she was recovered and brought back to the Thames.

BACKED LIFE BOAT

It was Lloyds which discovered the inventor of the lifeboat, Greathead, and gave him the encouragement and the funds to complete his work.

Back in Disraeli's time it supported a Quaker member of Parliament, who despite the indifference of the prime minister and the hostility of vested interests, fought through the measure establishing a load line for ships.

This was the Plimsoll line, which corrected the murderous practise of sending overloaded old hulks to sea with the expectation that they would never reach port.

Even greater service was performed by this ancient insurance corporation. Early in the nineteenth century it brought to life the barbarities of the slave trade with such effect that the aroused agitation did not subside until England had abolished the traffic in "black ivory."

Lloyd fired the first gun in that famous crusade for humanity by refusing to pay the insurance on slaves whom the captain of a black birder had thrown overboard.

Would Cripple Defense

By JAMES T. WILLIAMS, JR.

As the academic year begins in every state in the Union, so begins another sapping expedition by disloyal and deceived Americans to cripple the Common Defense by inciting American youth to desert their duty to the Flag.

These workers are now soliciting loyal Americans for contributions with which to finance an organized effort to incite American students in nearly three hundred schools and colleges to combat the continuance of that system of training with the Colors for national citizenship which the Congress has provided for in the National Defense Act.

Abraham Lincoln, soon after he became President, signed the law which started this system of training in American colleges.

Subsequent Congresses have extended this training to other schools and colleges. It has been approved by every President of the United States who has succeeded Lincoln in the White House.

Under this system of training school and college students are offered a chance to prepare themselves to defend the country of their allegiance against foes within and without the household of the nation.

The attack on defense training in school and college is organized by men and women calling themselves Americans.

They make the specious pretext that George Washington did not know what he was talking about when he said: "One of the most effectual means of preserving peace is to be prepared for war."

The organizers of this movement declare that a defenseless America is the goal toward which peace-loving Americans should strive.

As a first step toward its destruction they are asking money with which to finance opposition among students to the Abraham Lincoln system of training with the colors.

They seek first the passage of a law by Congress to penalize any State which continues this system of training.

Having obtained the passage of such a law, these sappers admit that their next effort will be to organize the students in all American schools and colleges against volunteering for any training to defend their country against foes within or foes without.

Among the cities in which this subversive movement has its money-raising headquarters are Washington, Boston, New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle, Detroit and Pittsburgh.

Meantime these disloyal sappers against the common defense deny that they are aiding the Communists, despite the fact that in attempting to destroy the Reserve Officers' Training Corps and to organize American school and college students to refuse to train to defend the flag they are doing one of the things which Moscow long ago ordered its agents in this and other countries to do.

'Dear Govt.'

By Winston Norman

Mr. President
Wash. D. C.
Dear Mr. President:

WOULD you like to adopt I and my wife's 2 children? We have 2 children by the name of little Millicent, age 5, and little Wilbur, age 7, they are the cutest Forgotten Kiddys you ever seen.

My kids are not exactly Orfans, Mr. Pres., because their mother & father (which is Me and my wife Mabel) are still alive. But they might as well be Orfans, on acct. I am out-of-work and we can't feed them very good.

How I found out you have went into the Adopting Business, my Neighbor told me so. He says to me:

"Well, was you lissening on the Radio when Mr. Roosevelt adopted that child?"

"Na," I says, "What was the child's name?"

"Boulder Dam," says my Neighbor. "Boulder Dam is a cute littie Orfan about 700 ft. high, which Sen. Johnson & the Republicans gave birth to," he says, "but when the dam dedication begun Mr. Roosevelt was there on his Radio, so of course everybody will figger that he was the father."

I opened my mouth, Mr. Pres., but my Neighbor didn't give me no chance to use it.

"The next thing you know," he says, "Ickes will have will take down Lincoln's Tomb & bury Mr. Tugwell in it. They will tell us that the Lincoln Tomb was built by the Brain Trust, and the Rocky Mts. wouldn't never of rose up if it didn't been for the Raw Deal."

"Oh, is that so?" I says, "Well, you are just a Sour Grape, because the Raw Deal is the kind of a Govt that finnishes what other folks begun."

"Ain't it the truth," says my Neighbor. "Take the U. S. A. for instance. George Washington begun it, and the Raw Deal will finnish it if we give them another 4 years on the job."

Yours very truly.
W. Norman.
